WLB Urges Lewis to End Coal Strike In 2 States

Davis Confers With UMW Head As Alabama Trouble Spreads

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

United Mine Worker officials yesterday despaired of getting an estimated 23,500 striking coal miners back to work before Monday as the War Labor Board called on UMW President John L. Lewis to urge the men to return to work at once "so that full and continuous production may be resumed."

The strike, which started in Birmingham, Ala., Wednesday after Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes returned all Government-held coal mines to their owners, affected about 20,000 miners in Alabama yesterday, and spread to nearly 3500 workers in Indiana, according to the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, strike reports reaching here indicated that a stoppage affecting mining by the Utah Copper Co. at Magna, Utah, ended, but walkouts slowed production of two shipyards and an aluminum fabrication concern.

Blast Furnaces Close Down

The International News Service reported from Birmingham that 16 blast and open hearth furnaces were being shut down in the area as a result of a coal shortage caused by the strike.

WLB Chairman William H. Davis, after conferring with Lewis, disclosed that he planned to ask the board to act on the coal strikes if they were still in progress today.

Davis said he discussed with Lewis the joint application of the Illinois coal operators and the UMW for approval of a wage agreement providing a daily wage increase of $1.75, part in compensation for travel time and part in compensation for more work, but did not go into the Alabama situation.

Informed labor circles disclosed that UMW officials were working to obtain a return to the pits by Monday in hopes of expediting

Streetcar Hits Man During Blackout Here

An unannounced blackout last night caught Washington after theater-goers and others enjoying the night life as the blue signal (the warning) went on at 11:54 p. m. and continued through the red signal, until the white or all clear signal went on at 1.

The red signal, which meant all lights off and all traffic stopped, went on at 12:19, to be followed by another blue at 12:32 a. m.

The yellow silent signal, which warned all police cars and others concerned, went on at 11:35.

During the blackout Rudolph Brodt, 58, of 2344 Q st. se., was hit by a trolley car at 7th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. at 12:12 a. m., while the blue signal was in effect. The safety guard of the car passed over him and it was necessary to jack up the car to extricate Brodt. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, suffering head injuries.

Building Union Funds Ordered Impounded

Rank-and-File Plea Also Wins Restraining Order Against Officers

The treasury of one of Washington's largest labor unions was padlocked and its officers restrained from using their right of office yesterday by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, as the rank and file of Building Laborer's Union Local 74 asked District Court to "help break a Nation-wide racket."

Larry Kelly, now a fugitive from a District grand jury, led the union of 10,000 members for many years. Another defendant is the mother union to which the local belongs—International Hod Carrier's, Building and Common Laborers Union of America with 450,000 members.

Forty members of the local union charge fraud, embezzlement, "rigging elections," and a shortage of $150,000 from a treasury controlled by few men.

These men, the suit says, are, Joseph V. Moreschi, international president; Herbert Rivers, vice president; Kelly, and 15 other local building laborers' union officials.

The suit is a complement to the criminal investigation which is suspended while Kelly is missing. A bench warrant is out for his ar-

House Group Amends Draft Bill's Terms

'Indispensable' Is Dropped From Senate Measure

A House Military Affairs subcommittee yesterday stripped from the Senate-passed father draft bill Senate provisions requiring certificates of "indispensability" for all able-bodied nonfathers of military age retained in the Government or industry.

Representative John M. Costello (Democrat) of California, subcommittee chairman, told The Post the Senate provisions for shaking nonfathers loose from the Government and industry "do little more than restate present law" and were not regarded by the subcommittee as necessary.

Under present law and Selective Service practice, only nonfathers whose employers certify they can not be replaced are granted occupational deferments, "and the word 'indispensable' doesn't add anything to that," Costello said.

45,000 in Government

So far as deferments in Government are concerned, Costello said: "That situation is rapidly being cleaned up and you soon will hear no complaints. There are already 45,000 nonfathers in the Government who have been classified 1-A and soon will be called."

Cases where Federal nonfathers have occupational deferments from their draft boards not specifically requested by their department heads are being reviewed, too, he said, and soon will be inducted if they are not irreplaceable.

The House subcommittee struck out, along with the rest of the Senate "indispensability" amendment, the requirement that such men be fired from the Government.

Blow to Food Budgets

Sales Tax Means Pay Demands, CIO Leaders Warn Congress

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

CIO President Murray, along with leaders and members of affiliated unions, warned Congress yesterday that a sales tax would cut into the average warworker's food budget, and would lead promptly to demands for higher wages.

Heads of several unions brought with them members who described their personal budgets. The theme of each was that most of their expenses are fixed, and the only place to cut would be in their food expenditures.

Besides opposition to the sales tax, the CIO program called for repeal of the Victory Tax, closing of tax loopholes and higher corporation taxes. To lighten the tax load on low income groups, the witnesses also urged boosting exemptions to $1500 for married, $750 for single, and $400 for each dependent.

The program opposed increased taxes for those with incomes of $3000 or less, and favored higher taxes on incomes over that amount, with a $25,000 ceiling after taxes on personal income.

The hearing was punctuated by a sharp row between Representative Reed (Republican) of New York, a committee member, and Richard Frankensteen, president of the United Automobile Workers.

Reed, introducing a tabulation of war strikes, observed that the great mass of labor was composed of the finest type of citizens, but they have been led by "a lot of thugs."

"They have made a great record except where a lot of you bandits have interfered," he told Frankensteen.

Frankensteen flashed back that "if the gentleman (Reed) and his kind would stop playing politics all

No Power Politics

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 15.—Wendell L. Willkie said tonight that the cause of world peace would not be advanced by "defensive and offensive alliances between any two of the principal Allies," and called for peace organization on a world basis.

His address, carried over a Nation-wide hookup of the National Broadcasting Co. (6 to 8:30 p. m., C. W. T.), was his reply to a series of question put to him by Missouri political groups.

"I can testify from personal observation," Willkie said in his speech prepared for delivery, "that all the world turns to America for leadership.

"Therefore, tentatively, hopefully, I should like to see this country exercise its utmost qualities of leadership and moral force to bring Great Britain, Russia, China and the United States to a point of understanding where they will make a joint declaration of intention as a preliminary to forming a common council of the United Nations and other friendly nations, and eventually of all the nations. Out of the practice of cooperation and out of the substance of agreement will come our only chance to realize man's hope for peace."

Against Power Politics

Willkie said the goal of world peace would be missed "if America tries to play a hand at the old game of power politics—a game which is played always at the price of permanent peace and a game at which we will find ourselves inept and frustrated."

When the war is over, he said, America, in its dealings both with friends and vanquished foes, "must encourage and seek to work exclusively with the forces that are neither Nazi-tainted nor Fascist-tainted."

Willkie said he would support for President a Republican candidate whose record "leaves no doubt that he is qualified for leadership," in the cause of advocating "real international participation."

Turning to the domestic front, he assailed "the palace guard," who, he said, "use their multiple powers of government to perpetuate the leader from whom their importance stems."

"Now even if I agreed with all the policies of an Administration that has held such power for so long," he said, "I would think it vital to terminate that power."

He added: "I furthermore be-

Nazis Falling Back on Rome; Reds Battle for Breakthrough At Northern Door to Crimea

Score 7-Mile Gain; Germans Announce Wrecking of Rebuilt Dam on Dnieper

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 16.—Russian soldiers blasted the hard-fighting Germans in the wrecked buildings of Melitopol yesterday in hand-to-hand fighting and charged 7 miles down the railway from Zaporozhe in a major battle for a break-through at the northern door to the Crimea, Moscow announced early today.

More than 4500 Germans were killed in the area, comprising about a 56-mile front from south of Zaporozhe to Melitopol in the southern Ukraine, a bulletin said.

Part of the battlefield was reported flooded by the Germans, who announced they had destroyed the rebuilt Dnieper Dam, a few miles from Zaporozhe, in an attempt to stall the attack. The Russians, however, made no mention of the dam.

Fighting for three days in the center of Melitopol, Soviet troops were forced to use their bayonets and hand grenades to pry the Germans from fortified buildings including a factory and a church.

Town's Fall Imminent

The Moscow midnight communique supplement, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, made no claim that the town had been captured but its fall appeared imminent as another column moved on the town from the northeast.

Fighting savagely for the town—beyond which lie the flat plains that lead to the Crimea—the Germans piled in reinforcements from other sectors and sent wave after wave of counterattacks against the Russians.

Northward at Zaporozhe the last remnants of German troops were cleaned from the river's east bank and at least 1500 were reported drowned in the Dnieper as they sought to escape.

Stubborn fighting also raged on the middle Dnieper, where German counterattacks withered before massed Russian guns at the bridgeheads on the west bank of the river north and south of Kiev. The Germans are being dislodged from one line after another, a Tass dispatch said.

Schweinfurt Bearing Plant Obliterated

Half of All Nazi War Production Declared Knocked Out by Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 15.—The Nazis' 72-acre ball bearing plant at Schweinfurt was obliterated in yesterday's daylight Fortress raid, the American Air Command announced today, and the record loss of 60 bombers, was declared officially to be not excessive for the results obtained.

Brig. Gen. Curtis E. Le May said that an estimated 50 per cent of Germany's ball bearings were produced in the Schweinfurt plant, and that therefore the American raiders had in effect smashed 50 per cent of the enemy's war production.

In Washington, President Roosevelt and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States Air Forces, expressed a similar view. Arnold said this effect in some phases would be felt "within a month—and will result in shortening the war. (Arnold's full comment on Page 2.)

Losses May Be 15 Per Cent

The loss of bombers represented 15 per cent of the raiding force if it equaled the record number of 400 planes used against German targets twice last week. An average loss of 5 per cent is considered an "economical" rate of operation, which both the RAF and the American Eighth Air Force have been maintaining or bettering.

"We had expected our losses to be heavy, and they were," said Brig. Gen. Fred L. Anderson, bomber wing commander, "but the damage done to the enemy was much greater. The weather over the target was excellent and the bombs were concentrated upon vital points in the area.

"The results of this attack eventually will be apparent in a shortage of German tanks, planes, guns and armored vehicles on the Russian, Mediterranean and Western Fronts and in a slowdown in submarine construction."

The raiding crews were told before they took off that a successful

London, Oct. 15.—Greek guerillas were reported today to have repulsed a force of 4000 Germans in central Greece and advanced toward the railroad town of Karditsa, 160 miles north of Athens, in a new offensive adding to the Germans' already grave Balkan problem.

The Germans were said to be pouring reinforcements into Yugoslavia to counter irregulars in isolated battlegrounds through 800 miles of territory from the Istrian peninsula south to the Greek Peloponnesus. One Cairo dispatch said the Quisling police chief of Belgrade had been assassinated by patriots under the very noses of the Germans.

German radio reports said Allied forces were poised for thrusts into Yugoslavia and Greece. They said the Allies had established a number of jumping off points on Aegean Islands after the Italian capitulation and that Greece was a favorable target for Anglo-American amphibious warfare.

British Landings Menace Enemy's West Flank; Bloody Fighting in Progress

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 15.—Reeling from sledgehammer frontal assaults by the American Fifth Army and their western flank menaced by a powerful British landing force, Nazi defenders of the Volturno River line fell back toward Rome today in some of the fiercest fighting yet seen in the Mediterranean war.

"The enemy's position hourly is becoming more desperate and he will obviously be forced to pull out from all the low area near the river," a military spokesman declared on the basis of news direct from the three-day-old battle.

Streams of Allied troops, tanks, artillery and antitank guns poured across the Volturno on scores of makeshift bridges as assault teams consolidated their hold on high ground overlooking the vital Capua bridgehead. Gains east of Capua averaged from two to five miles, an Allied announcement said.

Desperate Counterattacks

The Germans yielded their positions only after bitter resistance, and time after time launched desperate tank-led counterattacks in futile efforts to dislodge the Americans and British at key points. Allied tanks and tank destroyers joined the infantry in the furious drive across the still-flooded flatlands north of the Volturno and into the heights beyond, which rise to 4,000 feet.

(A German communique acknowledged the Allies had "superior infantry and tank forces on both sides of Capua." A Berlin broadcast placed the attacking force at one tank and four infantry divisions.)

Terrific fighting also was reported raging along the coast near the mouth of the Volturno, where British infantry and tanks poured ashore early Wednesday from new American-type, open-mouthed landing vessels and dug in along a canal under the protective fire of three destroyers.

This amphibious force was attempting to roll up the enemy's coastal anchor four miles north of the Volturno, where the Nazis had concentrated artillery on the dominating heights in apparent anticipation of such a maneuver.

"The enemy has learned to be uneasy about his flanks exposed to the sea," and Allied spokesman asserted. "Because with these new American landing craft it's so easy to put troops ashore swiftly."

(The Algiers French radio reported that the Germans had or-

Young Lieutenant Scores For Navy at Brewster Inquiry

Post Staff Writer

A broad-shouldered young lieutenant, carrying the ball for Navy, ran through the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee yesterday in the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. investigation and scored the only touchdown to date of the three days' hearings, bringing his opponents up cheering.

Lieut. J. J. Reynolds, industrial relations officer attached to the Third Naval District, apparently squelched any move to have the Navy withdraw its Corsair and bomber contracts from the Brewster Corp. Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the Naval Affairs Committee, who had been pressing for the contract withdrawal, announced he would introduce a motion to have the subcommittee file an interim report at this time, and reopen the hearing two months from now.

The lieutenant, who started in as a common laborer with the United States Pipe and Conduit Co. and wound up as assistant to the president in charge of industrial and labor relations, gave the committee a two-and-a-half-hour lesson in the intricacies of labor relations.

He answered the committee's major question to date—why the Navy had not acted to force a change in the restrictive labor contract which officials had testified was a major cause of Brewster's lack of production—by turning it right back on Congress.

In response to a question he also told the committee flatly that so far as Navy operations are concerned, he didn't believe the rules should be changed.

"The Navy represents the whole country," he said, "and must not be put in the position either of labor baiters or management haters."

The substantial points made by the lieutenant were the same made in previous testimony by his superior, Rear Admiral S. M. Kraus, but were given with the breeze of a man recently commissioned in the Navy, as against the caution of a long-time Navy career man risen to admiral's rank.

The committee preferred the lieutenant's broken-field running, terming him "the best witness yet," and thanking him for what they called a clear and forceful presentation.

Some of the highlights of the labor relations lesson were:

No bad union is ever created by anything but bad management.

The one thing you can't write into a contract is mutual respect and confidence.

A congressional decision to investigate the lend-lease program was broadened almost immediately last night to include a check into the spending of other Federal agencies abroad.

First, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted to undertake jointly with the Truman War Investigating Committee an inquiry into lend-lease, vast agency for aiding the Allies.

Chairman McKellar (Democrat) Tennessee, of the Appropriations Committee, said this investigation probably would begin by November 1.

He then met with a subcommittee to chart the course of the v[illegible] and Senator Nye (Republ[ican] North Dakota, who reported o[n] meeting, said it had been de[cided] to include also the foreign a[ctivi]ties of the Office of Inter-Ame[rican] Affairs, the Reconstruction Fin[ance] Corporation and the Export-Import Bank.

"The primary purpose will be to give Congress and the people an over-all picture of how American dollars are being spent abroad by all agencies," Nye said. "We don't know enough about what this country is doing abroad and what it may have promised to do."

As for the original lend-lease investigation plan, committeemen had said it probably would cover complaints such as were heard following a recent war-front tour of five Se[nato]rs—that all was not well in t[he] use of American supplies shi[pped] to Britain and others.

President, Arnold Defend Bomber Loss

Roosevelt Not Worried by Schweinfurt; Air Chief Cites Heavy War Plant Damages

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt said yesterday that while the loss of 60 heavy bombers in a raid on Schweinfurt, Germany, was very heavy, he saw little chance that losses over an extended period would exceed additions to the air force.

The Commander in Chief told a press-radio conference he wasn't worried about it. We could not afford to lose 60 bombers every day, he said, and we are not doing so.

While nearly 100 enemy fighters were shot down, the President commented, they are not the equivalent in manpower of 60 bombers because they are smaller and cheaper to build and take less time.

On the credit side of the picture, Mr. Roosevelt said, a very large industrial plant or plants probably was put out of commission, thereby retarding the enemy's production of munitions.

General Arnold's Statement

The War Department released a statement quoting General Arnold on the significance of the raid as follows:

"Enormous damage to the huge ball bearing plants at Schweinfurt by B-17 Flying Fortresses of the United States Army Eighth Air Force, in an advanced type of daylight aerial battle yesterday, struck a heart-damaging blow to the entire German war production and machinery maintenance program, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general, United States Army air forces, announced today.

"General Arnold said the ball bearing plants at Schweinfurt had been a preeminent target on the carefully planned list of German undertakings marked for destruction by the AAF because they had made at least half of the ball bearings manufactured in German-occupied Europe and 75 per cent of those manufactured in Germany itself—including vast amounts in military airplanes, submarines, tanks, torpedoes, trucks and other machines. He ranked the attack on the ball bearing plants in importance with the previous blasting of the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania by American bombers.

Cost 60 Planes, 593 Men

"Achieved at a cost of 60 Flying Fortresses and the loss of 593 crew members, at least half of whom are believed to be alive as prisoners of war on the basis of past experiences, the success of the Schweinfurt attack will have a definite effect on the German war economy within a reasonably short period of time—in some extremely important phases within a month—and will result in shortening the war," General Arnold said.

"'These Schweinfurt plants turned out a tremendous amount of ball bearings for the German war machines', the air forces commander said. 'We know the ball bearing industry represents a potential war production bottleneck, for it is impracticable to assemble any considerable stockpile of ball bearings.

"'All high speed moving parts depend on ball bearings to eliminate friction. They must have ball bearings to operate war equipment. This attack on Schweinfurt amputates a huge part of the Nazis' ability to keep moving machinery in operation, whether machine tools, airplane maintenance and construction, trucks, tanks, gun carriages, antiaircraft, torpedoes, even submarines.

"'Wrecking the German ball bearing industry has a widespread destructive effect on the war effort of the western Axis because of the dependence of high speed moving parts on these bearings. You cannot time this effect definitely, but you can calculate that it will begin to be felt within a month and will grow progressively worse after that.

1000-Mile Round Trip

"'Our bombers flew a 1000-mile round-trip to achieve this victory. Two huge waves of B-17s blasted the target in clear weather. We dropped 485 tons of high explosive bombs and 88 tons of incendiary bombs on it. Reports say the results of the bombardment were excellent.

"'The bombers met the most intensive fighter opposition that they have yet encountered. That is the payoff on the importance which the Nazi attached to his ball bearing industry at Schweinfurt. The more important the target, the more fiercely he fights to protect it.

"'Our first reports show that we destroyed 86 enemy fighters, probably destroyed 25 more and damaged 12. In addition, the fighter escort for our bombers claimed destruction of 13 enemy fighters, probable destruction of one more and damage to five others. Two of our fighter planes are missing.

Thunderbolt Escort

"'Fighter cover for the Flying Fortresses was provided by P-47 Thunderbolts which escorted the bombers part of the way to their targets. Their range was reduced considerably because of doubtful weather for their return at their bases in England.

"'This attack on Schweinfurt was not merely a spectacular air raid. It was an engagement between large armies—a major campaign in a period of a few hours, we invaded German-held Europe to a depth of 500 miles, sacked and crippled one of her most vital enterprises.

"'We did it in daylight and we did it with precision, aiming our explosives with the care and accuracy of a marksman firing a rifle at a bullseye.

"'We moved in on a city of 50,000 people and destroyed the part of it that contributes to the enemy's ability to wage war against us. When that part of it was a heap of twisted girders, smoking ruin, and pulverized machinery, we handed it back, completely useless, to the German. Ball bearings cannot now pour from this ruin, and no moving machinery will operate without ball bearings.

First Priority Industry

"'This industry at Schweinfurt was the fountain-head of a first priority German war industry. Destruction of these factories is typical of what our bombers have been doing in destroying vital targets such as airplane factories, submarine pens, synthetic rubber plants, construction centers and other concentrated enemy war production installations.

"'We cut down his tools of war before they could ever be forged. We cut down his motor lorries before they could be assembled. We spiked scores of his antiaircraft guns before they could even be mounted. And we blasted from the skies a vast armada of his fighter planes which is rendered even larger because at the same time we were blocking his ability to replace them.'

Three Great Plants

"The target at Schweinfurt, in northern Bavaria, comprised three large plants, two owned by the Vereingte Kugellager Fabriken A. G. (V. K. F.) and one by Fischer A. G., often referred to as Kugel-Fischer.

"Military aircraft absorb a large part of ball bearings produced. It is estimated that the average use of bearings is 1000 for each plane built for war purposes. A large four-engined bomber uses up to 3400 ball bearings, and smaller planes use 300 to 400.

"Much of the precision machinery essential to the manufacture of ball bearings was made for Germany in other countries before the war and consequently is virtually irreplaceable."

"Can't Do That"

Axis Protests Azores Deal

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 15.—Germany and Japan lodged formal protests in Lisbon today over the granting of anti-submarine bases in the Azores to Britain, and although Germany hinted at reprisals, neither Berlin nor Tokyo showed any disposition to go to war with Portugal on the issue.

Both nations, according to Tokyo and Berlin broadcasts, charged Portugal with violating her neutrality. Protest notes were handed to the Portuguese government in Lisbon.

A Berlin broadcast said, after charging Portugal with violating her neutrality:

"From this, the Reich government reserves for itself the right to take counter-measures in accordance with the changes of the situation in the Azores."

Great Schweinfurt Ball-Bearing Plant Reported Wiped Out by Raid

completion of their mission might shorten the war by six months, another indication of the importance attached to the target by the American command.

The heavy bombers had to blast their way through what a USAAF authority described as "the stiffest and fiercest fighter opposition in the history of aerial warfare."

Gen. Le May in an interview asked:

"What other method of warfare could be used to destroy that much war effort with a loss of 600 men?"

The Germans in their version of the raid acknowledged heavy damage at Schweinfurt, but they claimed a great air victory. After first broadcasting last night that they had shot down 70 of the attacking bombers, today they raised the total to 100, then 123 and finally to 139. They estimated that 300 bombers took part and said that therefore "approximately 50 per cent" of the raiders were shot down.

The Germans boasted of employing a new "smoke rocket" which they said spread a smoke screen and confused the bombers, but none of the returning crewmen reported having seen anything resembling such a weapon. The Germans said also that "mosaic tactics" were used effectively, explaining that this "consisted in dissolving massed aerial battle into innumerable dogfights."

Several of the returning pilots reported meeting the slow, twin-engined rocket-carrying fighters which have been appearing lately, and they seemed to have been out in considerable numbers. The pilots' reports, however, chiefly concerned the flak of 20-millimeter cannon and machine-gun fire, old standbys in the Nazi aerial arsenal.

Discussing the whole picture, Le May said the German war industry will be so smashed by spring that the Nazis won't be able to fight effectively on land or sea or in the air.

The Germans are shooting the works on their last hope of defense, fighter planes, but it is not much of a hope, the general said, "and once they run out of airplanes and supplies they are done."

The fact the Germans are using rocket-gunned planes of every type, some of them obsolescent, "may be a measure of desperation," Le May concluded.

Russians Batter At Crimea 'Door'

more than 800 Germans were killed the Germans withdrew, Moscow said.

The fighting in the southern Ukraine centered around the elaborate fortifications built by the Germans as their "winter line," Moscow dispatches said.

The prize for the break-through would be the low, flat reaches to the west where a quick advance might seal up the Nazi divisions holding the Crimea. With them were the Germans who retreated from the Caucasus when the Russians last week cleaned up the last German foothold on the Kuban River.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Berlin radio commentator, said the battle had been going on for almost three weeks. The Germans are dug in across the river from Zaporozhe and are counterattacking at Melitopol where the Russians "made local dents."

Churchill to Face U.S. Criticism Query

Senators' War Comments Stir Ire in England

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 15.—Capt. Peter D. MacDonald, Conservative member of Parliament, gave notice today that he would ask Prime Minister Churchill at the next session of Commons "whether his attention had been called to the specific charges of unfair action and bad faith made against the British by five United States Senators and whether to avoid a diffusion of ill will he will place on record the British view of the facts."

Another Conservative, Capt. Alec S. Cunningham-Reid, said he would ask Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden what government facilities were accorded the five Senators.

George Morgan Garro-Jones, parliamentary undersecretary to the minister of production, said in a speech at Liverpool:

"When we reflect, as sometimes all of us must, that the blood of men of all nations and the silent tears of their bereaved are shed in the belief and consolation of a future better than the past, we must feel contempt for any, whether American Senators or British critics, who by pettiness, falsehood or selfishness sow new seeds and weeds of bitterness on earth."

Expanding on the familiar monkey statuette in a gibe at the five battlefront-visiting United States Senators, the Daily Mail published a cartoon showing five felt-hatted, spectacled and scowling simian figures squatting in a row.

The first had his hands over his eyes and was captioned: "I Saw No Good."

The second, with his hands over his ears, bore the caption: "I Heard No Good."

The third, with hands over mouth, was saying: "I Said No Good."

The fourth, whose arms were folded, commented: "I Want No Good."

And the last, thumbs in ears and fingers waggling, said: "I Am Up to No Good."

The faces of all the figures were identical and bore no particular resemblance to any of the five whose off-the-record report was critical of Lend-Lease, particularly as it affected Britain, and immediate United States postwar commitments. However, the cartoon appeared over excerpts from columns of various American writers commenting on the Senators' criticisms.

War Sidelights

AP Writer Prisoner Of Germans

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 15 (AP).—Larry Allen, Associated Press war correspondent, who was captured September 13, 1942, while accompanying British warships in a raid on Tobruk, was among Allied war prisoners, the Italians permitted to fall into the hands of the Germans, it was learned today.

Persons who saw Allen as recently as last September 25 said he was then in a prison camp at Sulmona under German guard and that he was scheduled to be taken into Germany the following day. Allen previously had been in an Italian prison camp at Chieti, 100 miles east of Rome. Sulmona is 75 miles east of Rome.

Nazis Got Italy Tip-Off

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Swiss newspaper Dovere said today that Marshal Ugo Cavallero, former chief of Italian armed forces, killed himself after informing the Germans of the Italian capitulation, thereby forcing the Allies to change their invasion plans.

Cavallero's suicide had been reported previously by Stefani, German-controlled Italian news agency.

Greek Guerillas Repulse 4000 Nazis

Nazi planes were machine gunning villages in the Volos and Larisa areas west of Karditsa. (The British radio said the Germans also shot 100 Greeks in reprisal for patriot activity.)

In Yugoslavia, where Marshal Erwin Rommel was reported taking over the German command, street fighting was said to be enveloping Zenica, 140 miles west of Belgrade, on the Bosnia River, in what the Germans call the Bosnian Ruhr.

Yugoslav informants here scoffed at reports that Josip (Tito) Broz, leader of the Partisans, and Gen. Draja Mihailovic, government-in-exile's war minister, were near a union of their armies.

Farther Apart Than Ever

"The two forces are farther apart than they ever have been," Yugoslav leaders said. Nevertheless Yugoslav officials in Cairo, where King Peter has gone to await an Allied offensive, branded as untrue a report that Mihailovic had said his forces had not fought and would not until the Allies landed divisions in Yugoslavia.

Both British and Germans were said to be rushing fresh reinforcements into the Dodecanese, Aegean Island pathway into the Balkans.

The situation was still unclear since no official reports have been issued by the Allies but unconfirmed accounts from Turkey said the Germans had reoccupied the islands of Cos and Castelrosso after the British had seized them from the Italians. Leros and the Greek island, Samos, to the north, were also reported held by the British but imperiled by the loss of the airfields on Cos and Castelrosso. The British have also been reported in the Cyclades Islands in the Greek Archipelago.

French Fascist Leader Protected by Police

Madrid, Oct. 15 (AP).—Spanish correspondents in Paris reported today that such hatred exists against Juan Herold Paquis, Radio Paris broadcaster and ranking French Fascist, that he must work under police guard.

Even members of the French Popular Party, in which Paquis was said to have emerged as top figure after its founder, Jacques Doriot, sought safety with the French Legion in Russia, were searched for arms at a recent meeting at which Paquis spoke, these correspondents said.

Reeling German Troops Fall Back Before Fifth Army's Onslaught

dered the evacuation of Italy's entire western coast north of Ostia as a precaution against further Allied landings. Ostia is at the mouth of the Tiber River, 10 miles from Rome.)

Patrols of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's Eighth Army stabbed forward steadily in the mountainous center of the fighting line that extends across Italy to a point just north of Termoli on the Adriatic. Montgomery's forces were not meeting heavy and sustained resistance at any point, but the Germans were fighting numerous sharp delaying actions.

Yesterday the Eighth Army captured the town of Casacalenda, 5 miles northwest of Bonefro and 20 miles southwest of Termoli. A spokesman said British and Canadian patrols were approaching the communications centers of Campobasso and Vinchiaturo. Other villages engulfed by this phase of the Allied drive were Monacilioni, Santa Elia and Toro. (The Berlin radio reported German forces had evacuated Campobasso.)

Rolling Enemy Back

An official dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army headquarters told of the continued and substantial success of his drive through the vaunted Volturno Line. "The Fifth Army continued its strong drive which is rolling the enemy slowly back," it said. "Numerous pockets of resistance are being wiped out."

Allied engineers, who were among the principal heroes of the initial assault early Wednesday, continued to throw bridges "of every sort" across the river, dispatches said. The bridges, all built under direct German fire, averaged about 100 yards in length. Although the infantry was able to wade the Volturno at numerous points, it would have been impossible to move heavy equipment across without bridges.

Some of the heaviest fighting took place around the town of Caiazzo, a mile north of the river where it makes a northern bend 9 miles east of Capua. There German and Allied forces converged to join in a great battle which may decide whether the Nazis are to be routed from the entire Volturno area or whether they can hold on for a slow withdrawing movement.

Many men on both sides had been in action and under fire almost continuously since the start of the offensive nearly three days ago.

Enemy Weak in Air

The surprising weakness of the enemy in the air was apparent throughout the battle area. Swarms of Allied craft, ranging from heavy bombers to fighters, were overhead all day, and only two were lost against four Nazi planes destroyed.

Flying Fortresses smashed the important rail junction of Terni, 50 miles north of Rome, leaving freight yards spouting flames and smoke. The destruction will seriously affect the enemy's ability to send troops or supplies from northern Italy to the present battle zone. The Fortresses shot down 2 of 35 Nazi fighters that rose to attack, and the remainder quickly turned away.

Both Fortresses and Liberators attacked railways along the Adriatic, causing widespread damage, while Allied fighters and fighter-bombers pounded trains north of Pescara. American Mitchells escorted by Lightnings again blasted a Nazi airfield at Argos on the Grecian Peloponnesus. The Lightnings shot two Messerschmitts down in flames.

All 43 Countries Accept Bid To Relief Parley

All 43 countries invited to the United Nations relief meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., next month have accepted, it became known yesterday, and several will be represented by their Prime Ministers.

The Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation has practically completed the agenda for the meeting, which will start November 10 and probably will last four or five weeks.

One of the main problems to be thrashed out is how to prevent distribution of relief from becoming a political weapon in the hands of returning governments-in-exile.

Army Arrests

3 Argentine Ministers Replaced

By the Associated Press

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 15.—Argentina, beset by new troubles arising from her foreign policy, remained outwardly calm today although there were some signs of nervousness in Buenos Aires, travelers reported.

Several army officers whose political leanings are considered by the government to be uncertain were reported under house arrest.

Previously said to have been having difficulty in filling the three vacancies caused by the resignations of three cabinet officers, all regarded as favoring a break with the Axis, Ramirez is reported in a Buenos Aires announcement as finally overcoming that obstacle.

Two civilians were appointed to the ministries of finance and of justice and education, and a retired admiral was named minister of public works. The government crisis appeared to be still with Ramirez, however, as a fourth vacancy remained unfilled—that of foreign minister, vacated by Segundo Storni last month.

The swearing in of Gen. Edelmiro Farrell as vice president highlighted another of the mysteries of recent Argentine changes.

The post had been vacant since the death last July of Saba Sueyro, and the government had announced its intention of leaving it vacant. The belief is that Ramirez chose an army man to assure continuity of the military government in the event he should decide to step out.

Another development was the publishing today in two leading Argentine newspapers, La Nacion and La Prensa, of a manifesto signed by 150 prominent Argentines demanding that the nation not "discard her constitution or disassociate herself from her sister American nations and those who, the world over, fight for democracy."

Newspaper Ban, Called Nazi Act, Suddenly Lifted

By William T. Peacock
Associated Press Staff Writer

The rift in United States-Argentina relations widened yesterday when President Roosevelt described the South American nation's ban on Jewish newspapers as an act in character with "the most repugnant features of Nazi doctrine."

Furthermore, Mr. Roosevelt took the view that it was another Argentine failure to live up to inter-American agreements. He recalled that a resolution adopted at the 1938 Pan-American Conference in Lima declared:

"Any persecution on account of racial or religious motives which makes it impossible for a group of human beings to live decently, is contrary to the political and juridicial systems of America."

(At Buenos Aires, a few hours later, the press office of President Pedro Ramirez said that the ban had been canceled. The criticism by Mr. Roosevelt has not been published there, the Buenos Aires dispatch said.)

(Dispatches from Buenos Aires Wednesday said all Jewish newspapers printed in Yiddish had been suspended. This includes the principal Jewish newspapers of Argentina. The dispatch said Jewish newspapers printed in Spanish had not, up to that time, been affected. No reason was assigned for the suspension.)

Mr. Roosevelt's rebuke to Argentina was in the form of a statement which he gave to his press-radio conference. Asked whether anything on the subject is being sent to the Argentina government, he replied that this is a matter for the State Department, but he had no doubt that his statement would get down to Argentina.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement said:

"I have been informed that the Argentine government has suspended the publication of Jewish newspapers, some of which have been in existence for many years. While this matter is of course one which concerns primarily the Argentine government and people, I cannot forbear to give expression to my own feeling of apprehension at the taking in this hemisphere of action obviously anti-Semitic in nature and of a character so closely identified with the most repugnant features of Nazi doctrine. I believe that this feeling is shared by the people of the United States and by the people of the other American republics."

He added the reference to the Lima resolution on persecution.

Willkie Sees U. S. As Peace Leader

lieve that the ending of that power is necessary not only for the preservation and development of a free society in the United States but for the hope of a free society in the world."

But Willkie cautioned the Republican Party that it "will not deserve leadership and cannot win if it merely attempts to coalesce under its banners the various negative groups within the country." He said that in formulating its policies the Republican Party could not afford "to yield to the special pleas of self-interested economic pressure groups.

"It must find its strength," he said, "not, as does the present Administration, in dividing and ruling, but in a national policy that unifies the peoples. It must seek to make America, after this war is over, a land of ever-expanding opportunity—opportunity not just for a few top men to make their fortunes with the help of all other men, but opportunity for every man to work, to develop his abilities, and to receive the rewards of his effort, economic, social or political."

Has Five Point Program

Willkie outlined the following five-point program of "measures for which the Republican Party must stand in order to bring about expanding opportunity for every American:"

1. Elimination of "every wasteful, socially unnecessary expenditure of the people's money," and postwar modification of taxes on income.

2. Enforcement of present laws and passage of new ones, if necessary, "to make our system completely competitive."

3. Adoption of a "wise labor policy," not "in the punitive spirit of the Southern Democrats' Smith-Connally Act," but recognizing that "men who work and do not own have no adequate economic and social protection except in their collective strength."

4. Adoption of a "far-seeing policy" on agriculture, "recognizing the necessity for soil conservation and the fact that the real hope of the farmer lies not in an economy of scarcity but in expanding markets."

5. Development of a "method of cooperative effort between industry and Government" for the "more orderly, long-term adjustment" of fluctuation in durable goods expenditures.

Party Watched, He Warns

Willkie advised the party the public was watching it carefully.

"They are tired and disillusioned with their present leadership," he said. "They would like to turn to the Republican Party. But they are resolved that this country will cooperate and cooperate effectively with the other nations of the world that their sons may never again be needlessly slaughtered and that peace may be preserved for their own economic well-being and for the economic well-being of mankind.

"They will never elect as President a candidate who hedges or qualifies or whose record is ambiguous, or one concerning whose position they have the slightest doubt on this, the basic issue of our day.

"But once the Republican Party convinces the American people of its sincerity in advocating real international participation, I am confident that the people will recognize this party as the party of the future.

"For in our party there are able men, there are the progressive traditions, there are the dynamic policies capable of revolutionizing the outlook of mankind.

"It is our task to arouse the mighty efforts and enterprises of our people, and through these to make peace a reality for men and women everywhere in terms of work and trade, reward and human hope.

"If the party selects from among its many able men as its candidate for President in 1944 a man whose record leaves no doubt that he is qualified for the leadership of such a cause, I will, of course, support him.

"And it is unthinkable that the party will select any other kind."

To Press Fight

11 Senators Would Amend Peace Policy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A bipartisan group of 11 Senators yesterday decided to carry their fight for clearcut peace commitments to a Senate roll call, unless the Senate Foreign Relations Committee "strengthens and clarifies" its subcommittee postwar compromise.

The Senate 11, nucleus supporters of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill permanent peace resolution, called another meeting this morning to start drafting amendments to the cautiously-phrased, 65-word compromise.

Three Changes Asked

They will ask three specific changes in the subcommitee draft:

1. Creation of an international organization or agency to settle disputes between nations without recourse to war.

2. Use of military force if necessary to suppress aggression and keep the peace.

3. Specification that United Nations allies form a basis of the postwar world organization.

As presently worded, the compromise declaration does not deal in specifics, providing instead in general terms that the United States, acting through constitutional processes, "join with free and sovereign nations in the establishment and maintenance of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

The bipartisan group will ask removal of the controversial word, "sovereign."

Decision to force a Senate showdown if their amendments fail in committee was announced in a joint statement by Senators Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, and Pepper (Democrat) of Florida, spokesmen for the group.

Country Should Know

In separate interviews they answered leadership arguments that if their amendments were submitted to the Senate and defeated it would have a discouraging effect on our allies.

"If the Senate is going isolationist after the war, I think the country ought to know it now," said Senator Hatch.

Senator Ball said merely passing by a big Senate vote a compromise declaration that even former islolationists considered harmless, would certainly not reassaure our Allies.

Senator Pepper estimated the group already had enough strength to support its request for a record Senate vote on clarifying changes in the substitute.

Pepper, like Hatch and Ball, said their proposals were minimum for assuring a definite line of United States world action after the war, and the test should not be delayed until "too late."

Chairman Tom Connally of the Foreign Relations Committee, who also personally favors use of military sanctions, has warned the bipartisan group that the subcommittee compromise "is the best they can hope to secure." Leaders are lining up solidly behind the compromise because they believe it will command a two-thirds treaty-ratifying vote, and can be passed with a minimum of bitter debate.

Besides Ball, Burton, Hatch and Hill, present at yesterday's bipartisan conference were Senators Pepper and Andrews of Florida, Guffey of Pennsylvania, Mead of New York and Maybank of South Carolina (Democrats), and Bridges of New Hampshire and Ferguson of Michigan (Republicans). Pepper and Guffey are members of the Foreign Relations Committee.

A formal statement issued by Hatch, Ball and Pepper said the group decided unanimously to press for amendments.

Senate Draft Bill Terms Amended

committeemen said it obviously would be unjust to fire them ahead of their induction.

The changes were made in a rough draft of a revised bill completed yesterday. Costello said the subcommittee will meet again to consider the finished draft and possible last minute changes. He said the revised bill will be favorably repored to the full House Military Committee on Tuesday.

Few Additional Changes

Few other major changes in the Senate bill were made in the subcommittee rough draft, although language requiring all eligible nonfathers so far as "practicable" to be called up ahead of fathers will be strengthened. Costello said the subcommittee has been assured by Selective Service that nonfathers already are being called ahead of parents on a national basis.

Retained in the subcommittee draft was the Senate bill requirement that occupational deferments by a local board be reviewed by the Selective Service appeal board having jurisdiction over the area in which a man works, with final power to review such deferments vested in the Selective Service director. The provision was designed to double-check local board deferments.

Also retained in the bill was the Senate provision for appointment of a medical commission of five qualified physicians by the President to review Army and Navy physical standards. This provision aimed at possible lowering of standards for limited service, and culling over of the list of 4-Fs.

over the lot and do something constructive, we'd have a hell of a lot more war effort."

Reed replied that when the soldiers come back "they'll take good care of you, and don't you forget it."

"We'll take our chances," Frankensteen retorted. Representative Dingell (Democrat) of Michigan broke in to say that he deplored calling Frankensteen a "bandit" and said the latter had been a wholesome influence in preventing work stoppages.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee approved and sent to the floor legislation already passed by the House to repeal the postwar refund feature of the victory tax, and give all payers the benefit of the current credit already provided by law when they file their returns next March.

Byrnes Seeks Unity In Adjustment Plan

President Creates New Unit for Study Of War and Postwar Conversion

President Roosevelt said yesterday that problems of war and postwar adjustment are under consideration and that unified programs and policies for Government agencies will be developed.

A new unit dealing with the problem has been set up in the War Mobilization Office headed by James F. Byrnes.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement, given his press-radio conference, follows:

"At my suggestion, Justice Byrnes, director of War Mobilization, yesterday met with heads of various agencies concerned with the problems of terminating or revising war contracts in light of the changing demands of our war strategy. The War and Navy Departments are now in the process of revising more than 8000 contracts involving several billions of dollars.

To Study Whole Range

"It is planned to set up within the Office of War Mobilization a unit to deal with war and postwar adjustment problems and to develop unified programs and policies to be pursued by the various agencies of Government concerned. The unit will study and consider the whole range of problems which will ultimately arise out of the termination of war contracts, including the problems of reconversion and disposition of plants and property no longer required for war use.

No Bearing on Mobilization

"The work has deliberately been placed within the Office of War Mobilization to insure that such reshaping of our war program as may be required will be carried through with a view to increasing the effectiveness of our war effort. While we must prepare for necessary postwar adjustments, this preparation must not interfere with the long and hard war programs which are still ahead of us."

Mr. Roosevelt said these operations had no direct bearing on mobilization, remarking that we still are at work on the mobilization program.

But he told questioners he thought it was all right to say that a year and a half ago Secretary of State Hull with the cooperation of many national and governmental leaders, undertook to study various postwar problems. He said labor, agriculture and business, and people of every political character were cooperating in this and that he envisaged the fullest cooperation between the legislative and executive branches of the Government.

situation, are fundamental to society itself. Reynolds told the members that seniority governed their seats on the committee, and governed the Navy as well.

Defends Kaiser's Action

To committee charges that Henry Kaiser, production genius and new President of the Brewster Corp., appeared to be following a policy of appeasement in giving production jobs to four guards handed bad-conduct discharges from the Coast Guard Reserve (temporary) following a strike at the plant on their behalf last August, the lieutenant entered a powerful defense.

He said that in his opinion giving jobs to the guards was a wise labor relations policy. He said the guards, who had good records prior to the plant trouble, were among the "18,000 constituents" of Tom De Lorenzo, union boss.

De Lorenzo, he said, had pledged his support to Kaiser management openly and fully, and was being accused now of "having sold out to management." Kaiser, Reynolds indicated, had adopted an "intelligent device" to smooth labor relations.

Drewry Takes Issue

In a speeche later, Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia took issue with this, saying he believed the guard question transcended in importance the Brewster question as a whole. Maas also declared that reinstatement, even in different jobs, of the men would have a bad effect on morale of men in the armed forces.

Reynolds said that Kaiser was one of the very few industrialists who was also an excellent labor relations man, and declared he believed Kaiser could straighten out the Brewster mess and would have the cooperation of De Lorenzo. He agreed that if Kaiser did not succeed in raising production within a very short time, the Navy contracts should be canceled.

Newspaper Stories Praised

Reynolds agreed with committee members in statements that De Lorenzo had been a dictator of his union, arrogant with power, but said he believed the committee investigation, among other things, was prompting a better attitude.

He said the council table, not newspapers, was the place to discuss labor problems, but Maas took issue, asserting that the committee would not have acted and the Navy would not have acted but for revelations of Brewster conditions in the newspapers. Maas said that he believed the newspapers had been factual, fair and impartial and had served a very wholesome purpose.

Building Union's Funds Impounded

rest for appearance before the grand jury.

The civil action follows the pattern of locals of the union in other parts of the country. Seven court orders have been obtained against officers of the intenational union. One leading vice president of the union is under New York indictment on a charge of extorting $700,000 while a second official has received a 10-year sentence for embezzling.

Representing the rank-and-file is widely-known Labor Attorney Hyman N. Glickstein of New York, with Samuel Levine as local counsel.

Permanent Injunction Asked

With the granting of the restraining order, the local now asks the court to permanently enjoin the defendants from what it calls "continuing their illegal conspiracy to operate Local 74 as a dues-collecting racket for their own private interests. It asks for a general election of officers, charging fraud in the last election of April 17, 1943, in which it is alleged union members were threatened with loss of jobs unless they voted for Moreschi's choices. The suit asks that funds of the union be administered by an impartial receiver pending court decision. Last, it aims that the District Council, comprising 11 local unions, be put under court control until the case is settled.

The suit states that the treasury now contains more than $50,000 and union property impounded includes a $100,000 building at 523 New Jersey ave. nw.

When officials of the union were telephoned for comment, a secretary replied that all were out of town until Monday.

Other charges in the suit are:

Over $19,000 stolen from the union to purchase liquor for the El Patio Club by Kelly, once a copartner in the night club.

Approximately $15,000 stolen to pay for a house purchased by Kelly and his wife.

Spending of $100,000 to purchase real estate, most of which allegedly was retained by the defendants as "secret and illicit" profits on dummy deals.

Over $75,000 collected for a Civilian Defense Fund stolen and never accounted for.

Barracks and cafes built at Cedar Point, Md., with no proceeds accounted for.

A general fund reduced from $110,000 to $44,000 and a building fund reduced from $15,000 to $1700 illegally.

165,000 Yule Gifts Mailed To Fighters

More than 165,000 Christmas parcels, mailed by District residents through midnight last night, will be delivered to fighting men overseas by reindeer, dog sled, camel's back and native runner, as well as in more typically American fashion.

Vincent Burke, District postmaster, said that a total of 125,210 presents had been mailed through Thursday, since September 15. He estimated for yesterday that between 40,000 and 50,000 were sent before the deadline last night. The total for Thursday was 23,719.

The packages are going to the icy stretches of the Arctic, the far reaches of the South Pacific, and to hundreds of A. P. O.'s around the equator, north and south. In Alaska, reindeer and dog sled will perform Santa Claus' delivery mission. In Central Africa, the soldiers will receive Christmas presents from pouches borne across the desert on humps of camels. In many places, the native runner will take gifts to the fighting men.

Since September 15, an average of half a million presents has been mailed daily throughout the country to soldiers overseas.

Burke reminded yesterday that the deadline for mailing presents to Navy men is November 1. No more five-pound parcels, the maximum weight of Christmas packages, may be sent to Army men. Only presents requested by the men from their overseas posts or parcels weighing up to eight ounces to be sent first class can now be mailed and there is no guarantee that they will be delivered before Christmas.

Canada Relaxes Wartime Ban

Ottawa, Oct. 15 (AP).—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King announced today amendment of the defense of Canada regulations to remove a wartime ban applied against several organizations. These were listed as Jehovah's Witnesses, Technocracy Inc., the Ukrainian Labor-Farmer Temple Association, the Finnish Organization of Canada, the Finnish Society, and the Finnish Society of Toronto.

A number of organizations still remain banned, including the Communist Party of Canada. Today's statement gave no details of the reasons for amending the regulations.

Lewis Urged To End Strikes In Two States

WLB consideration of the Illinois contract which they expect to get approved.

Meanwhile, Secretary Ickes appealed to the War Labor Board to act promptly on the miners' wage demands to avoid a possible general coal strike after the October 31 deadline set by Lewis. Undersecretary of War Patterson and Undersecretary of Navy Forrestal in joint letters to Davis also urged action before the deadline.

Ickes informed Davis:

"We are now some 30 million tons below our bituminous goal and we are running behind at the rate of about 500,000 tons a week. Unless this trend is reversed, the end of the road will be disaster. Some of our heavy war industries will have to discontinue operations, and it is doubtful whether we can keep our railroads running uninterruptedly . . .

"My own feeling is that if we should reach midnight of October 31 without a contract between the operators and the miners, there almost inevitably would follow runaway strikes which might spread to the entire industry. If that should occur, it would not only be a catastrophe of the first order, it would be worse than that—it would constitute a blunder of magnitude."

At the Kearny, N. J., yard of the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., some 6000 employes walked out during Thursday night and 800 workers marched to the office of the Navy Yard supervisor yesterday to request that the Navy take over the plant. Last night, however, the company reported that the work stoppage apparently had ended.

In Philadelphia the Cramp Shipbuilding Co., engaged in work for the Navy, disclosed that approximately 2000 workers failed to return to their jobs after the midday lunch period.

The company said in a telegram to John Green, international president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (CIO), that "we know of no reason for the work stoppage."

Union members gave differing explanations. Some said the cause was dismissal of a union member, others that it was "unfair distribution of work."

Another new strike was a walkout by 700 workers at the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corp.'s Adrian, Mich., plant. A spokesman for the CIO United Automobile Workers Union said the stoppage developed because no contract had been negotiated with the union, which won a bargaining election two months ago. The plant produces parts for airplanes.

Dormitories In Arlington Dedicated

The 11 buildings of Arlington Farms, Va., including 10 dormitories for 5000 WAVES and civilian Government workers and a recreation building that has just been completed, were officially opened last night with an address by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The place of women in the war program was discussed by the principal speakers who included, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt: Lieut. Comdr. Mildred McAfee, director of the WAVES; Mrs. James H. Doolittle, wife of Major General Doolittle, and Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant to Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator.

Overflow Attendance

Approximately 1500 residents of the six civilian dormitories and four occupied by the women's uniformed services of the Navy filled the auditorium of the recreation hall and stood outside the doors where an amplifying system conveyed the addresses.

Mrs. Roosevelt said, that it does not matter to what party a woman belongs so long as she exercises citizenship and through democracy does her best to see that the world of the future is not like the world of the past.

Referring to the rise in child delinquency and the increasing demands on womanpower for the war program, she declared: "We must organize the whole pattern of life so that homes will not suffer. We did not get to this pattern quick enough so that now we are faced with a difficult situation."

Sometimes Wonder

Mentioning the fact that not a single bomb has fallen in the United States, Mrs. Roosevelt said this was fortunate in that it had provided opportunity for building up a tremendous production machine but the security of the country sometimes makes women wonder why they should give up their traditional way of life.

Mrs. Roosevelt stressed the importance of women taking over their full responsibilities of citizenship while the men are away at war "so that you can keep faith with the dreams of the men who are in far away places and see that this country remains as they have pictured it in their minds."

WLB Listens to Arguments In Guild Union Security Case

By the Associated Press

The War Labor Board yesterday heard arguments for and against application of maintenance of membership clauses in union contracts with newspapers, a union security policy which the board has adopted with many otner industries but not in the news field.

Such application is being urged by the American Newspaper Guild (CIO).

One of the first witnesses, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, president and publisher of the New York Times, told the board that William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, opposed a closed shop or maintenance of union membership clause in the newspaper industry "because it is human nature for news writers who might have a closed shop to favor their own organization in their writing."

Green's Opposition Quoted

"I feel this way even if an AFL union of newswriters should ask for the closed shop," Green was quoted as saying

Sulzberger said Green had added a belief in an anteroom of the White House that "no union of newspapermen should have the closed shop" and had told the New York Times official that freedom of the press was involved "in the closed shop demand of the Guild."

If his paper had had a maintenance of membership provision, Sulzberger said, it would have been compelled to discharge three of its most valuable writers because all of them at various times had resigned from the Guild. He said these men were William Laurence, science writer, and Louis Stark, labor reporter, both Pulitzer Prize winners, and a "brilliant" editorial specialist, Robert Duffus.

Morris Ernst, attorney for the Newspaper Guild, contested publisher testimony that maintenance of membership would interfere with newspapers' constitutional rights with respect to freedom of the press.

Asserting there should be no attempt by newspapers to convert writers into "intellectual eunuchs," he described the publisher arguments as "completely untenable."

He stated that under the maintenance of membership clause, guild members are given 15 days in which to decide whether to resign or remain guild members in good standing for the duration of the contract.

May Still Keep Jobs

"If they decide not to stay in the guild, they may resign and still remain in the employ of the newspaper," he said.

"The only situation in which the presence of such a clause has any effect, not on freedom of the press, but even on an employer's selection of personnel, is if an employe who voluntarily agreed to remain a member of the guild in good standing for the duration of the contract, subsequently changes his mind and fails to do so.

"In such a situation, the employer may not retain the employe on his staff. He is, however, free to replace that employe with any other person who he thinks will satisfactorily convey the employer's prejudices to the readers of his newspaper."

Louis M. Loeb, attorney for the New York Times, stressed that a writer must report factually on such things as the sales tax and when the writer's union takes a position against the sales tax he is under a restraint to adopt the same view or lose his job by getting out of the guild.

Ben McKelway, associate editor of the Washington Star, appeared in opposition to the guild proposal. He spoke for his paper, as well as the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Cleveland News, and St. Louis Globe Democrat.

McKelway said the Star supported the board's maintenance of membership policy as far as it represented a "practical if expedient, method of temporarily resolving the closed shop controversy in war plants and keeping men at work."

But he said it should not be applied to the editorial departments of newspapers because of a fundamental difference between the principle as applied to mechanical unions and editorial workers.

Louis Seltzer, managing editor of the Cleveland Press, said he believed in the Newspaper Guild but that he parted company with it on the current issue.

"You can't build a free press," he said, "unless there is a free state of mind in the newspaper office."

Nip Exchange Ship Awaits Gripsholm

Mormugao, Portuguese India, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Japanese exchange ship Teia Maru brought 1500 American, Canadian and Latin American civilians into this jungle port today to be trade in barter system for Japanese nationals expected to arrive here tomorrow on the Swedish ship Gripsholm.

With few exceptions the Teia Maru's passengers appear in excellent physical condition and reasonably well-clothed considering their 21-months internment in Japanese-controlled territory.

Two District Officers Are Jap Prisoners

Two Washington officers, Lieut. Col. William L. Robinson, 2902 Porter st. nw., and Capt. Leonard S. Cairns, 2929 Connecticut ave. nw., are prisoners of war, interned in Japan, the War Department announced yesterday.

A card from Colonel Robinson received recently by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth L. Robinson, a counter agent for Eastern Air Lines at the National Airport, stated that he was in good health. When previously heard from the 28-year-old infantry officer was serving with General Sharp's staff on Mindanao Island in the Philippines. News that he was on Mindanao was brought to Mrs. Robinson last December by Maria Quezon, daughter of the Philippine president. Colonel Robinson, a graduate of West Point in 1937, went to the Philippines in 1939, after being stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

Captain Cairns, whose mother, Mrs. John L. Lindstrom, lives at the Connecticut ave. address, is an officer in the Quartermaster Corps. He was promoted to his present rank March 14, 1942, two months before the fall of Corregidor.

Also listed by the War Department as a Japanese prisoner was Pvt. Luther H. Mackenzie of Cumberland, Md.

Marine Squadron Bags 68 Japanese Planes at Cost of 3

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 15 (AP).—Marine fighting squadron 124—the first to fly Vought Corsair planes in the southwest Pacific—came home today with a record of 68 enemy aircraft destroyed and more than 20 probables. The squadron lost only three fliers.

With the group was one of the foremost Jap-killers of World War II—Lieut. Kenneth Walsh, 28, Brooklyn, N. Y., who has 20 enemy planes to his credit with several more probables. Walsh is second only to Maj. Joe Foss, whose record of 26 makes him America's No. 1 air ace.

Ellenderland

Senator Ellender of Louisiana led his colleagues on Tuesday into the wonderland of statistics. He had, as he put it, spent "the past six months, in cooperation with a staff from the Library of Congress," in compiling the national debts of a number of countries. Here is a labor no less rewarding than the solution of crossword puzzles and quite as fruitful as research respecting the number of angels capable of standing on the point of a pin. The net result of the Senator's painstaking computations is that the national debt of the United States is larger than that of any of our allies or any of our enemies.

Mr. Ellender took the trouble to reduce all this indebtedness to a per capita basis. If we compare his figure for the United States and all its possessions with that for the British Empire and all its possessions, we find that the debt for each individual in the former amounts to $935 and in the latter to a mere $164. But the British Empire figure includes natives of Somaliland and Zanzibar, not to speak of some 388 million Indians. The per capita debt for the United Kingdom, according to Senator Ellender, is $1433, while the per capita debt for the continental United States is $1070. (The British Information Service estimates the present per capita debt at $1846.) On this basis it would appear that the average Briton has thus far made a larger money contribution to the war than the average American.

Since when, however, has indebtedness been an index to expenditure? The obvious reason for the staggering proportions of our own national debt is that we have not elected, as a Nation, to pay as we go. Our debt might be considerably smaller had we been willing to tax ourselves more heavily,—as the British, for example, have taxed themselves. The fact is that in 1942 the British devoted 62 per cent of their national income to making war, while we devoted 47 per cent. If Senator Ellender had been arguing for a stiffer Federal tax program, his figures might have had some relevance. As a basis for the denunciation of lend-lease, they are just about as pertinent as data on the mean average rainfall in Tanganyika.

The Whole Truth?

In compiling its recently published "Peace and War," a volume of official documents dealing with our foreign policy during the highly critical decade between 1931 and 1941, the State Department was obviously confronted with a task of extraordinary difficulty. To be sure, the book is compendious. But speeches and official statements had to be included, while many thousands of documents came into the department during that fateful period. It is not surprising, therefore, that far more was left out than was included. But it is certainly more than passing strange that no space was found for any of the dispatches of William E. Dodd, our Ambassador to Germany during the early Hitler period; of Claude Bowers, our Ambassador to Spain at the time of the Spanish Civil War; of Joseph P. Kennedy, who represented the United States in Great Britain during part of the appeasement period in British foreign policy, or of William C. Bullitt, our last Ambassador to Republican France.

Justified or not, such omissions create the suspicion that "Peace and War" falls considerably short of historical objectivity. This may be very unfair to the department and those responsible for the present compilation. Certainly it will only be after the archives are fully opened that we shall know whether any such criticism is justified. Nonetheless, in view of the fact that the department has been under attack, the job of compilation should have been turned over to a board of impartial scholars who could not be accused in any way of having an ax to grind. In other words, the department should obviously have done with respect to this period in our foreign relations what, some years ago, the British government did with respect to the 1898-1914 period in British foreign relations.

Instead of depending on Foreign Office officials, the British government gave carte blanche to Dr. G. P. Gooch and Dr. Harold Temperley, two outstanding students of diplomatic history, to compile the volumes of documents which have since been published. For reasons of state, Drs. Gooch and Temperley were not allowed to include in their compilation everything they might have wanted to include. But they were at least able to say that nothing material or important had been excluded. Can the same be said of "Peace and War"? It would not seem so. Given the circumstances of its publication, the impression will not down that it is primarily a lawyer's brief. It is clearly honest within its lights. It tells the truth and nothing but the truth. But many will question whether it tells the whole truth. A great opportunity has been missed.

Demobilization

The President yesterday expressed the official fear that preparations for postwar demobilization may detract from the vigor of waging war. Clearly a dilemma is involved. If, on the one hand, we begin to talk about and plan demobilization, there is bound to be some letdown in the national warmaking. The mere act of planning diverts attention which otherwise would be devoted to war work. On the other hand, neglect of the problem of demobilizing our military economy might have catastrophic results. Indeed, a sudden laying down of arms by our Nazi enemy—and this is by no means impossible—might so disrupt America as to rob the country of victory. Who knows but what the Nazis might have thought of it. Truly the notion is not extravagant. The United States is devoting two-thirds of its resources to war-making, and if the war were suddenly wound up, most of this activity would come to a standstill. That would mean dislocation of industry and widespread joblessness. Such a risk simply cannot be taken. Accordingly the President's decision to set up a group under Justice Byrnes' OWM for the development of a comprehensive system of orderly demobilization is urgent as well as prudent. On August 17 The Post advocated exactly this course. In our editorial we urged that the time had arrived to give the Office of War Mobilization a dual function as an Office of War Demobilization for the purpose of unifying the approach to this vast and complicated subject.

Hitherto the approach has been piecemeal—mainly with reference to war contracts. This in itself is a portentous issue. The end of the war will witness the wholesale cancellation of those contracts. American industry will thus find itself loaded down with raw materials, goods in a semifinished state, and mutual obligations. In other words, it will be all dressed up with no place to go. Only the bigger firms will have the wherewithal to begin at once the job of converting their plants to peacetime use. For the means of conversion, the others will require payment of the sums owed them by the Government. Obviously, therefore, speed of settlement is of the essence. This has been stressed in a report issued by the Committee for Economic Development, the body under Paul G. Hoffman which has sometimes been called the businessman's National Resources Planning Board. Some of the dimensions of the contract problem are presented in it. At present there are 100,000 prime war contracts and several times as many subcontracts totaling between 60 to 75 billion dollars. Inventories would add another 10 to 15 billion dollars to the total. If the repayment of these sums is held up, as settlement of World War I contracts were held up, then our transition from war to peace would be anything but orderly.

However, the demobilization problem must be thought of in the large, not in detail. Termination of war contracts is related to many other problems. A cash payment to manufacturers does not in itself solve the problem of layoffs. It will not necessarily insure the orderly but rapid employment of these funds for peacetime purposes. Nor will it guarantee the efficient operation of our productive resources. In short, demobilization of resources and men presents a complexity of problems all of which are interrelated. It is the way that solutions are interrelated that will determine the wisdom and the success of the transition. That is the reason that the President was well advised to set up an all-embracing group to unify the piecemeal work which is already being done by the war agencies. It is absurd, for instance, for the War Department to study plans for releasing the soldiers without knowing something about the absorptive capacity of industry. Similarly with the release of sums due on canceled contracts. There must be a plan for the use of these sums for the reconversion of plant and equipment. Maybe some firms may want steel in place of cash. A huge inventory question will be involved, as well as the disposition of Government-owned plants. All these issues require consideration in common.

In Congress there shoulu be the same over-all study of these demobilization problems as is now assured by the executive agencies. For a good deal of legislation will be required. So far, however, consideration has been piecemeal on Capitol Hill, too. A subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has started hearings on contract termination. The Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures will consider the O'Leary bill on the disposition of Government surpluses. The House Naval Affairs Committee has considered and issued a report on the need of Government funds for reconversion. The House Ways and Means Committee has held hearings on proposed exemption from taxation for special postwar contingency reserves. All these investigations are vitally necessary. They are all addressed to important aspects of the transition problem. Why not, in view of the relation existing between all of them, set up a joint committee that would deal with the transition problem in its entirety? Such a committee could then work as the opposite number to the new executive body which the President has just established.

High hopes for a fair investigation of the FCC—hopes that arose out of the recent appointment of Representative Clarence F. Lea to succeed the biased and vulnerable Representative Cox—sagged deplorably on Thursday when the committee met for the first time under its new chairman. The brief session was given over entirely to the dumping of star-chamber testimony into the record. If this is a sample of the inquiry the reorganized committee intends to make, it cannot possibly shake off the odium that Mr. Cox gave it.

The testimony in question was taken behind closed doors with neither the public nor the press allowed access. Often, no member of the investigating committee was present. Witnesses were summoned to testify before some members of the committee's staff. In many instances witnesses were subpenaed to these star-chamber consisting of hotel rooms or private law offices, apparently in violation of law. Some of them were required to take oaths, without any member of the committee present, also in violation of law. That part of their testimony which the investigator wished to use for smearing purposes was recorded, the rest was not.

Now the committee has allowed this one-sided testimony to be written into its record, without giving its own members a chance to question the witnesses. Most of this testimony was entirely irrelevant to the FCC inquiry, since it is devoted largely to Short-wave Research, Inc., an organization which held a contract with the OWI. Eugene Garey, the committee's counsel, attempted to create the impression that the commission was responsible for the activities of this organization and for its participation in an alleged violation of law. Actually, that agency did no work for the FCC, nor did it receive any funds from the FCC.

Only one reasonable course could have been followed in disposing of these star-chamber records: they should have been dumped into the incinerator so that the committee could start afresh to make a fair and unbiased investigation. The fact that they were dumped into the record instead is a very poor beginning for the Lea Committee. If it is to escape from the disrepute that brought the Cox Committee to the end of its rope, it will have to question its witnesses in open hearing. It will have to replace Mr. Garey and hire an attorney who knows how to conduct an investigation as distinguished from a mud-slinging orgy. And it will have to give the FCC itself a chance to tell the committee what it is doing and to answer the voluminous charges that have been piled up against it through the star-chamber method.

When the committee resumed its hearings on Thursday, the FCC was not even notified, and, of course, no representative of that agency was present. We hope that Mr. Lea will remember that he was given this assignment to extricate the House of Representatives from the scandal in which Messrs. Cox and Garey had plunged it. He cannot possibly do that job by continuing the indecent and intolerable procedure that made the Cox Committee a stench in the nostrils of the public.

Expensive Target

Brig. Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, chief of the bomber command of the Eighth Air Force, recently described Schweinfurt, center of the German ball-bearing industry, as "the most important target in Europe." It is thus not surprising that the Germans have tried to make it as nearly impregnable to air attack as they possibly could. Nor, in view of that circumstance, is it surprising that the losses suffered by our air force in the latest and most devastating raid on that Nazi industrial center were exceptionally heavy. A record total of 60 Flying Fortresses with a complement of 600 highly trained men were shot down.

It may be, given the importance of the target and the apparent devastation produced by the raiders, that relatively considered, these losses were not excessive. They were nonetheless very great both in total and, presumably, in proportion to the total number of bombers employed. This should bring home to Americans the fact that if we are to do an effective job of softening Germany by aerial assaults so as to make the ultimate invasion of the continent easier heavy losses may result. This means both an intensification of the air-training program and an increase in bomber production. Certainly the production of heavy bombers should be given A-1 priority and everything should be done that can be done to produce as many heavy bombers as is possible in the shortest possible time.

YOUNG AVIATORS

(To S. D. J.)

These boys don't think in terms of life and death,
But in terms of doing and being; they draw each breath
In golden instants,—in thunder across the sky,
And searchlights weaving bright activity!
The globe is theirs, mountains that heave through dusk,
And heavy tropic isles that smell of musk,
Sheer glacial slopes, the dangerous terrain,
Minarets that take the morning's ruddy stain;
The clustered towers of cities as pigmies shine
Beneath the feet of your splendid sons and mine!

Haitian Example

THE STATE visit of President Elie Lescot of Haiti to Washington has called national attention to the big contribution that that little nation is making to our war effort. The whole story of Haiti is one that Americans now weighing the merits of a cooperative foreign policy for this country should look into.

In our relations with Haiti is to be found one of many clear-cut examples that show how a constructive, cooperative foreign policy does not make this country a "sucker" nation, as short-sighted nationalists proclaim, but on the other hand is the clearest kind of enlightened self-interest.

Haiti is one of the smallest Latin-American nations, but it is by no means unimportant since it is one of the three Caribbean republics that straddle the Atlantic approaches to the Panama Canal. Since Haiti's independence, European nations have often meddled there and even made as if to move in. Haiti's financial dealings with them led to acute troubles before the first World War. In 1915, the United States took over their customs and financial affairs to try to straighten things out. We had to send troops in to maintain order.

Densely Populated

Haiti is one of the most densely populated countries in the Western Hemisphere, yet is mountainous and has little good land. Since colonial times it has produced coffee, cacao, sugar, cotton and bananas for export. The country imports large quantities of food and nearly all its made goods.

Competing with other producers in world markets and dependent on imports for food, Haiti has been barely able to exist. There has been no way for Haitians to amass capital or create national wealth upon which to draw for national improvements.

Wherever a nation is bound to an economic setup that presses its people down and prevents all progress, politics are explosive. Our attempt to establish civil order in Haiti by force of arms ended in their turning on us. While we were fighting the First World War, we had to meet an open revolt from Haitians.

Other upsets occurred through the 1920's. In 1929, President Hoover sent a commission of inquiry to Haiti. It advised that the policing of the country should be turned over to Haitians.

In the world crash after 1929, Haiti suffered extremely. Always on the edge of starvation, dependent on exports for money to import food with, they found it impossible to sell more than a fraction of their former exports. Anybody who expects a people to develop political stability under conditions like this ignores reality. Hungry people will always fight. No amount of policing can stop them.

Trade Agreements

When the Roosevelt Administration began the Good Neighbor policy in 1933, the first major economic instrument of it was the Hull trade agreements plan. An agreement signed with Haiti in 1934 began to breathe life back into the republic by giving it an outlet for its products. The Marines were withdrawn.

France has been taking nearly half Haiti's exports, but did not renew its trade agreement in 1936. Rising exports to us could not avert economic depression. In 1938 an Export-Import Bank loan for public works was a temporary life-saver But when war in Europe in 1939 took away more Haitian markets, it was obvious that some permanent solution had to be found for the country.

Two years of study by Americans and Haitians resulted in the solution—the Haitian-American Development Co., started in mid-1941 and financed by an Export-Import Bank loan It undertook to develop for the United States market new non-competitive products—rubber, fibers and others—and thus reduce Haiti's dependence on traditional exports.

This plan, which I shall report more fully in a later article, was getting under way when the Japanese struck. Emphasis was at once shifted to rubber and fibers, and operations were greatly expanded. Haiti is now rapidly becoming a major source of these vital supplies. The island is humming. President Lescot has set an international example by stumping the country to urge more production.

The contrast with 1918 could not be more complete. Then we had a fight on our hands because we were trying to impose order on a country that was speared on an extremely disadvantageous economy. In the late 1930's we began to try to help Haiti help herself out of this plight. Now Haiti is turning out supplies we need to fight with and there is peace in the canal area.

For those who like to think that cooperation with other countries always soaks the American pocketbook, it should be underlined that the development company is paying every dollar of Export-Import Bank obligations. Even if it did not, it would be cheaper than keeping an armed force there, as we had to before.

Eve Of Moscow

By Barnet Nover

Stalin's Revealing Action

ON THE EVE of the Moscow conference of British, American and Russian foreign ministers, Joseph Stalin has made a move which throws an interesting and revealing light on at least one corner of the great Russian mystery—the Soviet Union's postwar policy.

In a statement issued on the occasion of Italy's declaration of war on Germany, Marshal Stalin joined with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in underlining the Italian government's pledge "to submit to the will of the Italian people after the Germans have been driven from Italy."

That same statement also declares that "nothing can detract from the absolute and untrammeled right of the people of Italy by constitutional means to decide on the democratic form of government they will eventually have."

THIS DECLARATION greatly overshadows the occasion that prompted it.

It is rather dubious whether the Allies will derive any important direct and immediate advantages from the Italian declaration of war. It may, to be sure, put a crimp in Mussolini's efforts to establish an Italian puppet government beholden to and directed by the Reich. It will be viewed by Europe's neutrals as well as by Germany's satellites as another indication that Hitler's star is setting.

But these and similar benefits may be offset, in large measure, by the suspicions which the Italian move is certain to stir up in the minds and hearts of the French, the Yugoslavs and the Greeks.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin declaration indicates that the "Big Three" are in full agreement regarding the wisdom and necessity of re-establishing democracy in Italy, the form that democracy will take to be ultimately determined by the Italian people themselves.

Presumably what holds true for the Italians holds true as well for the French and for other countries which sooner or later will be liberated from the Nazi yoke, and for the German people, too.

In this connection Stalin's move will tend to remove the suspicion that the so-called Free Germany Committee established in Moscow under Russian sponsorship is merely designed to serve as a cloak for Communist intrigue with the ultimate purpose of establishing a Red Germany.

IT IS A FAIR assumption today, and his signature of the Italian declaration provides eloquent proof of it, that Stalin's postwar plans do not involve a return to the 1919 program of world revolution.

Stalin clearly realizes that a democratic Europe will be a peaceful Europe and it is peace which, above everything else, Russia will need when the present period of bloodletting and destruction is over. An attempt to communize Europe would, on the contrary, lead not to peace but to war—first civil war and then international war.

But Stalin's signature of the Italian declaration does not mean that Russia is ready and willing to fall in line with her allies on other aspects of postwar policy.

ACTUALLY, we can assume nothing of the kind. Indeed, it would be wiser to assume that, having made this concession to Anglo-American views, Stalin will now turn about and demand that equivalent concessions be made to the Russian views on such matters as postwar boundaries and spheres of influence.

It is certainly significant, in this connection, that on the very day the Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin statement was issued, Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, declared that "the Soviet borders cannot be a subject of discussion any more than, for instance, the borders of the United States or the status of California." By "Soviet borders" Pravda undoubtedly means not Russia's borders of July, 1939, but those of 1940.

If this is the line which the Kremlin will take in the forthcoming parley the expected discussions will be circumscribed from the start, that is unless both Great Britain and the United States are willing to adopt the Russian thesis on frontiers as their own.

As an added complication, Pravda insists that the conference deal primarily with military matters—the second front—rather than with political and economic questions. In view of the fact that the participants are the foreign ministers of the three nations and no military men this contention is not to be taken seriously. But it does indicate that, despite Stalin's welcome move in signing the Italian declaration the outlook for the Moscow conference does not appear to be altogether rosy.

Senator Lodge

Senator Lodge voices the opinion that one million American lives could be saved by Russia's granting the United States air bases from which to bomb Japan. This declaration strikes me as presumptuous and ill-advised.

There is here imputed to Russia a moral obligation to provide us with bases. Any objective appraisal of this alleged obligation would, it appears, have to take into account the consequences to Russia of such a course. Obviously a dangerous second-front war, in which she would embroil herself with perhaps 70 per cent of the Japanese military strength, would be Russia's price for acceding to the Senator's wish.

Since Russia is not now at war with Japan, the ultimate logic of the Senator's position is that Russians should voluntarily sacrifice themselves to save Americans.

Russia has an estimated eight million troops in actual combat, the United States certainly less than one million. Yet Senator Lodge has the temerity to expect Russia to take on another powerful enemy, presumably out of responsibility toward an ally, even though that ally has not yet come to Russia's much-needed assistance on any decisive scale.

The fatuous kind of reasoning behind Senator Lodge's thinly veiled demand reflects a vanity and a crass nationalism discreditable to those leaders charged with bringing to fruition the concept of a United Nations. Coming at this time, the Senator's indictment does violence to whatever unity the United Nations may have achieved or be about to achieve.

Johannes Brahms

Your music critic Ray Brown has recently written impressive articles on the Brahms quartets, given at the Coolidge Concerts, Library of Congress.

Constructive analysis, musical illumination, each is finely stressed.

One article mentions Brahm's chalet-home on beautiful Lake Thun, Switzerland. Personally, this is well-remembered. I was walking through the woods one morning near the lake when I came across the chalet with its hooded roof. Over the doorway was inscribed: "Here lived Johannes Brahms, and composed some of his most beautiful music."

Thun is a well remembered spot for its beauty and for the name of Brahms.

German Problem

In The Washington Post of October 5, Mr. Walter Lippmann has proposed a plan under the title "Shall We Govern Germany," which guarantees that there will be no solution to the German problem. His plan is, after the armistice, "to retire outside the German frontiers and to take under control all means of communication with the outside world—her export and imports and her external finances, the ingress and egress of Germans, the censorship of mails, telegraph and radio, the movement of ships, railways and highway transport . . . and perhaps certain strategic economic resources such as the Ruhr and Silesia."

The reason why I consider these proposals as highly destructive is the following. Who is going to administer this control? Not the army. The army has a sense of objective justice, duty and honor. Therefore Mr. Lippmann does not want them in control. Instead the control will be exerted either by Allied businessmen and bankers or by Allied politicians. In regard to the latter, the record of the Reparations Commission after the first World War is a pretty strong deterrent. As to the businessmen and bankers, the first concern of this controlling board will be to permit only such German exports as are not in competition with Allied exports.

The attempt to weaken Germany economically has once before been made, by Poincare in 1923. The result was the occupation of the Ruhr and a mood which prepared the soil for Hitler's success.

If a patient is desperately ill from an infection, as Germany is desperately ill from nazism, the first task is to eliminate the bacteria. But then one either subjects the patient to a careful and benevolent regime of recovery or, if one wants to put him on his own, one does not put insuperable obstacles in the path of his recovery. Mr. Lippmann says rightly that the Germans themselves have to win their liberties. But no people has ever been able to do so under the conditions which Mr. Lippmann suggests.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Adolf Explains All

("Strength of arms means nothing. It is the unbending determination at home to hold out and never waver that counts"—Hitler to his people.)

Some people laud the German arms—
They speak of Prussian force;
They emphasize my blitzes in
The world war's early course;
But planes and tanks and elite troops
Don't mean a thing to me;
The home folks (if they can stand it)
Are my key to victory.

II

They talk of monster armies and
My armaments so vast;
They point to acts of sheer brute strength
Within the German past;
But, ach, I seldom think of these;
I smack the weak about
With little but a firm belief
My people can hold out!

III

When I tore into Poland and Threw all I had at her
The fact my army had the edge
To me did not occur;
As German legions murdered Poles
And Warsaw was destroyed
The thought the Germans Would Hold Out
Was what kept me so buoyed!

IV

The day I tore all treaties up
And Belgium felt my boot;
When I blitzed children in the streets
And stayed to burn and loot
The fact I had the upper hand
To me had not appealed . . .
I did it all because I knew
That Germans Wouldn't Yield!

V

When I sent fleets of diving planes
To blitz the weak and old
And terrorize the refugees
My power left me cold;
I simply razed the villages
And knocked the weak about
With only this sustaining thought—
My People Could Hold Out!

IV

When I put on the London blitz
And battered Plymouth town
And blasted towns like Coventry
And knocked the temples down
It wasn't planes and bombs and shells
Or hatred fierce and hot;
The secret of it was the fact
That Germans Wavered Not!

VII

My double-cross of Russia was
Not based on strength at all;
It wasn't overpowering force
That gave my hosts the call;
Those town to which I gave the torch
Have got Der Fuehrer wrong . . .
I dared to do it for I knew
The German Will Was Strong!

VIII

The little tricks a Nazi loves—
(Those booby traps and such);
That Naples postoffice affair—
(It bore the Nazi touch);
These do not spring from German strength;
Such acts I always back
Because (ach Gott, I hope I'm right!)
The Germans Never Crack!

* * * *

Five United States Senators have returned from a swift tour of the battlefronts and, just as we feared, they report the war is not being run their way.

Private Purkey in a letter from the front adds a postscript, "Send back them five Senators; the going is tough without 'em."

Prohibition Threat

There have been introduced in the present Congress Senate Bill 860, providing prohibition in all military areas, and House Bill 2082, prohibiting the manufacture, sale and transportation of alcoholic beverages during the war and until after demobilization. In addition there are numerous organizations actively working for the return of total prohibition, apparently seeking to take advantage of the fact that many of our young men are in military service abroad.

The Eighteenth Amendment was adopted because the people were indifferent. This state of mind must not repeat itself now. We should be alert to sense prohibition strategy cloaked as before in the guise of military necessity.

The eighteenth amendment was probably, of all laws, the greatest failure in history. The reason is obvious: it has never yet been possible to enforce laws successfully which were unacceptable to the people.

Only a small minority objects to obeying laws that are inherently good. In all ages fanatical laws, when resisted, have been found difficult, if not impossible, to enforce. When, as in prohibition, the law can be evaded without serious disgrace, it is practically certain in time to breed disrespect for itself and for all other laws.

James Coolidge Carter in his lecture on "Law: Its Origin, Growth and Function," made this very clear by telling of the laws in the several States which were never enforced because they are unacceptable to the people, saying, "All these are fruits of the common notion, to correct which but little effort is anywhere made, that a legislative enactment is necessarily a law, and will certainly bring about, or help to bring about, the good intended by it, whereas such an enactment, when never enforced, does not deserve the name of law at all, and when the attempted enforcement of it is productive of the mischiefs above mentioned, it is not so much law as it is tyranny."

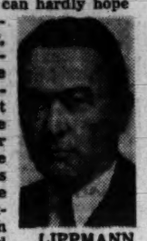
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Jose P. Laurel

THE FILIPINO, named Jose P. Laurel, whom the Japanese have just set up as President of the Philippines, can hardly hope to be as notorious as Quisling, Laval, and Mussolini. For the European traitors did at least go over to the enemies of their country at a time when there was a reasonable prospect of making their treason pay; they ratted when Germany had better than an even chance of winning the war.



LIPPMANN

But Japan can have no hope whatever, and nothing is more absolutely certain in this world than that the American forces will return to the Philippines. Mr. Laurel and those who collaborate with him will, therefore, have been singularly stupid if they have not already made their arrangements to escape.

THE CERTAINTY of Japan's defeat is not, however, fully realized by everyone even in this country. Yet the Japanese themselves have proved by their own acts that they have no hope of victory. The proof is in the fact that they have stood still for more than a year without attacking Great Britain, Russia, or the United States. Even when Hitler was in Stalingrad, Rommel at the gates of Alexandria, and the U-boats were at the height of their power in the Atlantic, it was still impossible for Japan to take the offensive, even against India, Australia, Siberia, Alaska, Hawaii,—certainly not against continental United States. They have been able to do nothing for Hitler as he is being driven out of Russia, out of the Mediterranean, and off the Atlantic Ocean.

Actions speak louder than words, and the Japanese actions prove beyond any reasonable doubt that their war was a gamble on a Nazi victory in Europe, and that they knew that when Hitler failed to win in Europe, they had lost their bet. The real feelings of the Japanese about the Nazis and of the Nazis about the Japanese must be unprintable.

THE JAPANESE war has been from beginning to end a parasite upon the Axis war in Europe. Japan single-handed could never conceivably have challenged China, the Netherlands, Britain, France, Russia, and the United States. It was the defeat of France, the mortal peril of Britain, the deep German invasion of Russia, and the unpreparedness and ambiguity of the American position in 1940-1941, which presented Japan with what looked like a unique opportunity. For with Hitler master of the European continent, and Russia in dire straits, the United States had to look to the defenses of the Western Hemisphere and could not concentrate the whole of our then inadequate forces against Japan. All the Japanese conquests were made in the first half of the year 1942, that is to say, while Britain and Russia were desperately engaged and the United States was as yet unmobilized.

The Japanese must have known that their conquests could be consolidated only if Hitler won the war in Europe. For Japan could never get at Britain, Russia, or the United States—much less all three of them—to knock them out. It was Hitler who had a chance to knock out Britain and Russia, and if he knocked them out, the United States would have stood alone against the victorious Japanese-German alliance. Therefore, the Japanese strategy has been entirely parasitic upon the German. They advanced when the Germans were successful. They stopped advancing even before the Germans began their retreat.

IT HAS been said that Japan has grown strong because she has conquered rich lands with large numbers of people in them. But in fact nothing is ever conquered unless the power from which the land has been taken is so thoroughly defeated that it cannot reconquer the land. Now Japan can do nothing to defeat her principal enemies while they assemble the force to defeat her. This means that in order to hold on to her conquests a little longer, she must put more into the conquered territory than she can get out of it. The net cost of defending her rich conquests must be, and is, on balance a drain upon Japan and not an addition to her strength. Japan is in the position of a man who buys a huge property with such a big mortgage on it that he has to use up his savings to postpone the foreclosure.

Nimitz's stroke at Wake and MacArthur's at Rabaul cannot have failed to show the Japanese military leaders the truth about their position and the shape of things to come.

IT IS from this military position that we can address the Filipino nation, saying to them that none has the right to question our good faith, and that we shall answer by our acts any who in weakness, corruption, or self-deception now profess to doubt it. We shall give the Philippines their independence in fact and not merely on paper. And when we say independence we mean independence made secure against any repetition of the aggression which, alas, we were not prepared in 1941 to prevent or resist. For we know and the Filipinos know that independence without security is a snare and a delusion.

The guarantees of that security have yet to be agreed upon. They will include a military alliance between the Philippine Republic and the United States, with full and explicit understanding of the military responsibilities that the Filipinos and the Americans undertake. They will require beyond that, and at a minimum, security alliances with all the neighboring powers of the Far Pacific, with China and Russia and Britain and the Netherlands and France. They will require a treaty of peace in which all are committed to common action against any signs of the revival of Japanese naval and air power.

WITH THESE guarantees the pledge of their independence, which we have given the Filipino nation, will be validated and redeemed. Without them it will have been a mockery.

D. C. Schools To Close for Rationing Job

War Ration Book No. 4, good for meat, dairy products, processed foods and sugar, and containing extra stamps to be used for articles to be rationed in the future, will be issued by public school teachers and volunteer workers in Washington schools October 21 and 22. Yesterday L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, stated that pupils will be excused from attendance at school on those days and announced the following rules for registration:

1. Individuals whose last names begin with the letters A to J should report to school buildings on Thursday, October 21, while those whose last names begin with K to Z should report on Friday, October 22.

2. War Ration Book No. 3 of each person for whom a book 4 is to be secured should be submitted to the registrar, and each book 3 should be completely filled in as to name and address.

To Avoid Congestion

3. Adult members of families not employed should apply during the day when registrars are not rushed and to avoid congestion one adult member of a family should apply for all of the books.

4. Individuals who cannot go in person because of illness or temporary absence from the city may authorize a friend to secure the book for them. The authorized agent must present Book Three of the person for whom he is securing Book Four.

5. Everyone who has Book Three is eligible for Book Four. However, books are not issued to inmates of institutions of involuntary confinement, such as prisons and mental hospitals, to members of Armed Forces of the United States or United Nations who receive subsistence, or who are members of officers' messes, or to persons who intend to leave the United States after the next 60 days.

The schools will be open from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. on October 21 and 22 for registration. Names of schools and their addresses will be listed later.

Cantrell explained that the OPA was returning to school house registration as a method of distribution after issuing Book No. 3 by mail because the agency did not have the staff to take care of issuing the books. Book 3 was mailed last June and July in order to relieve the public of the necessity for registering at schools.

18 Churchmen Tour District Slum Areas

Determination to use the church's influence for better housing was indicated last night by Washington clergymen, after contrasting dirty slums with clean, modern housing projects.

With James Ring, administrative officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, and the Rev. Francis McPeek, director of the Federation of Churches' Social Welfare Department, a group of 18 Protestant leaders went on a tour in the rain, and this is part of what they saw:

Two dilapidated 6-foot wide houses in the 1000 block of 3d st. se., near the neat Carrollsberg dwelling project; Negro families packed into ramshackle houses in Schott's alley, at First st. and Delaware ave., across the street from the marble facade of the House office building.

Within District Regulations

One of the 6-foot wide houses was occupied, the other had its door fastened with a heavy lock. Neighbors said that a family had lived there a short time ago.

(Attaches of the District building inspector's office said their records indicated that a permit for additions to houses at 1003 and 1005 3d st. se., had been granted in 1934 to Eugene Hall, 1802½ st. sw. While the District Building Code calls for dwellings not under 14 feet wide, there is no law regulating the width of additions, it was said, as long as a door connects the original dwelling and the addition. As one building official put it, however, there is nothing to stop a tenant from boarding up the door after getting his permit.)

Dr. Crawford Impressed

"I wish a lot of laymen in our church could make a tour like this," said Dr. Clarence W. Crawford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. "I don't believe many of them realize the full seriousness of the slum problem here."

Also on the trip were Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary; Dr. John W. Rustin, Federation president, and Dr. Robert M. Williams, president of the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance, and others.

Roosevelt Hits Postwar Rubber Tariff

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt expressed the hope yesterday that when he is "out of the White House," somebody will veto any attempt by Congress to protect synthetic rubber factories by putting a tariff on natural rubber from overseas.

Such a tariff, he said, would cause every American automobile owner to pay 50 per cent more for his tires.

The President, in looking to the day when he would be out of the White House, did not say when. Therefore his remark threw no new light on his plans with respect to a fourth term. By this time nearly all politicians expect that he will run again.

Mr. Roosevelt brought up the question of rubber at his news conference while describing a delightful dinner had had given the night before for his old friend, President Elie Lascot of Haiti. He authorized quotations from the talk he had made at the dinner.

Haiti Turning Out Rubber

"At the present time," he had said, "Haiti is engaged in the cultivation of a new plant, cryptostygea, which turns out rubber. This year they will be getting out 10,000 tons of rubber in Haiti.

"I hope that when I am out of the White House—I might get beaten otherwise—that the Congress won't put the kind of tariff on rubber for American automobile tires just to keep some synthetic plants going.

"That would mean that every man in the United States who owned a car would have to pay 50 per cent more for his rubber. I believe in cheap cars and more of them; and the only way to get that is to use the tires that are made by nature, whether it be rubber, or guayule, or cryptostegia."

Talking to reporters, President Roosevelt said that at the end of the war there was going to be a great amount of rubber coming from various plants. This rubber, he said, was cheaper for tire-making purposes than the synthetic rubber, and he foresaw an attempt by some people to erect a tariff barrier to protect the synthetic industry.

Then he went on to say that when he was out of the White House he hoped that somebody will veto any such tariff.

Harks Back 25 Years

The transcript of Mr. Roosevelt's talk at the dinner for President Lascot indicated that he was in a mellow mood. He said the occasion was a particularly happy one because it carried him back more than a quarter of a century, back to the time when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy and had to send the Marines to Haiti during a period of great unrest.

"We made a promise then," he told President Lascot and the other guests, "that some day Haiti would be independent, with its own government, its own republic."

He went on to recount how Haiti had received its independence in 1934 after he, as President, had withdrawn the Marines in August of that year.

Haiti Has Made Good

"And since that time," he continued, "one of the experiments of my life has been permanently successful because in the last 10 years of the Republic of Haiti not a single American has been there with a gun. Haiti has made good in every way. I regard the nation's advance in prosperity and in friendship during those 10 years as something that ought to be written in the history books."

Mr. Roosevelt told of the enchantment of Haiti's natural beauties, and added:

"I think it was a certain Queen of England who said that after her death 'Calais' would be written on her heart. When I die, I think that 'Haiti' is going to be written on my heart because for all these years I have had the most intense interest in the Republic of Haiti and the development of its people in a way that will never mean exploitation by any other nation."

WPB Units Get New Power in War Contracts

Acting for War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, who is now in Moscow, WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson has granted area production urgency committees in eight American cities broad powers over placement of new contracts as a means of solving manpower problems, it was disclosed yesterday.

Five of the cities are on the West Coast and are under the framework of the West Coast "labor budget" program approved September 4 by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes. Three additional cities—Detroit, Mich., Akron, Ohio, and Hartford, Conn., have just been formally added to the list, it was learned.

Allowed to Make Decisions

Examination of an administrative order setting up the production urgency committees within the War Production Board discloses that considerable authority has been granted to the groups to permit them to make major decisions on the spot—subject only to appeal to Washington.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the organizational structure of the "labor budget" plan which requires joint action by the WPB and the War Manpower Commission to solve labor supply problems has been subtly shifted to permit Wilson to emerge as the virtual "boss" of the program.

Appeals from area production urgency committee actions, along with major policy determinations, are to be made by the production executive committee, a WPB-armed services group headed by Wilson. Conflicts between the War Manpower Commission and WPB on this program will be ironed out in this committee, it was learned.

Decisions Made by Wilson

Lawrence A. Appley, executive director of the WMC, recently received a seat on the production executive committee to help carry out the plan, it was learned. Production executive committee decisions are made by Wilson—other members have only advisory powers.

The five West Coast cities in which the program has been operating for about a month are San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland.

The production urgency committees determine the comparative priority of each production program in each city. The data is then turned over to an area manpower priorities committee which translates the information into labor priorities to control the referral of available workers by the United States Employment Service. The manpower committee also establishes employment ceilings for each war plant, based on information provided by the production committee.

Under the WPB administrative order, the production committees can block the placing of additional war contracts in the designated areas, subject to appeal to the WPB procurement policy committee and then to the production executive committee. No plant may be constructed in one of the eight cities without securing the approval of the production urgency committee involved, or the production executive committee.

The Gallup Poll

Many Doubt Manpower Shortage Is Real In War Plants, National Survey Indicates

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 15.—One reason why the recruiting of new workers for war industries has been such a headache to the Government is that a surprisingly large number of Americans do not think there is any shortage of war workers.

A survey by the Institute reveals that only about one person in every three throughout the country believes there is any lack of labor for war plants. All the rest—nearly two-thirds—either claim there is no shortage or else say they do not know. Even in cities where the War Manpower Commission claims the labor shortage is most acute, the survey finds that the number of people who think there is no real shortage nearly equals the number who think there is.

Shortage Undramatized

In short, War Manpower officials have apparently failed to dramatize the labor shortage in such a way as to convince the public that the problem is acute.

From coast to coast, interviewers for the Institute put this question to a true cross-section of the population:

"Do you think there is a shortage of workers in war plants in this country?"

The replies are:

Yes	36%
No	42
Undecided	22

There appear to be four reasons why so many people apparently do not consider the manpower problem serious. In the first place, many do not live in areas where there are war plants, and hence have not been directly exposed to intensive advertising campaigns endeavoring to recruit labor. Second, a substantial number of persons—one out of every ten, the survey shows—say they have tried to get jobs in war industries and been unable to find one.

'Hoarding' Labor

Thirdly, many people take the view that war factories are "hoarding" labor as a margin of safety against future inroads by the draft or losses due to excessive turnover. A final reason in the public's mind is that labor union rules require the hiring of unnecessary extra hands and that the problem of manpower shortages could be partly alleviated by abolishing such rules.

Whatever the reason, it is interesting to note that while people living in large defense areas are more conscious of labor shortages than elsewhere, nevertheless even their views are closely divided.

'Acute' Areas Listed

The War Manpower Commission has singled out a list of communities where it claims that the manpower shortage is extremely acute. The communities include Bridgeport, Wilmington, Baltimore, Trenton, Detroit, Akron, Wichita, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Portland, Oreg.; Seattle, Spokane and a number of other cities.

The Institute survey finds that people living in these so-called "acute" areas vote as follows on the question whether there is any labor shortage:

Yes	46%
No	43
Undecided	11

In other areas where according to the Manpower Commission the manpower situation is serious if not yet acute, the survey finds a higher proportion of people who think there is no shortage. The vote is: yes, 36 per cent; no, 47 per cent; undecided, 17 per cent.

WLB Panel Suggests Raise For CIO Clothing Workers

The War Labor Board announced last night a special panel had recommended an increase of from 40 to 50 cents an hour in the minimum wage for experienced cotton-garment workers in shops under contract to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CIO) and had suggested additional adjustments in the wage scale.

The case now goes to the WLB for a decision. Approximately 40,000 workers are affected.

The panel denied the union's request for a 10-cent general increase, but recommended a sliding scale of raises ranging from 2½ cents to 10 cents an hour in plants where average earnings are less than approximately 70 cents in order "to prevent inequities arising from the application of the new minimum."

Set up by the WLB to hear testimony in the wage dispute between the union and companies representing about half of the garment industry, the panel was headed by William E. Simkin of Philadelphia, chairman of the WLB Shipbuilding Commission.

Midair Crash Kills Two Va. Negro Pilots

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 15 (AP).—Two Negro flying officers, Lieut. William H. Walker, 24, whose mother, Mrs. Broddy Walker, lives at Suffolk, Va., and Lieut. Leroi S. Williams, 24, whose mother, Mrs. Cardelia S. Williams, livs in Roanoke, Va., were killed in midair collision of pursuit planes Thursday while on a routine flight. The planes plunged to earth in flames in view of several motorists.

Oklahoma Governor To See Play Here

Gov. George S. Kerr and Mrs. Kerr of Oklahoma, accompanied by 23 State officials will be on hand Monday night for the opening of "Oklahoma," the Theater Guild's musical at the National Theater.

Coming to Washington for the occasion, they will attend a ball on the Willard Hotel roof sponsored by the Oklahoma State Society immediately after the performance at the theater.

4 Sentenced to Prison Terms For Lend-Lease Food Fraud

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., October 15.—Four persons were sentenced today in Federal District Court to prison terms upon conviction of conspiring to defraud the Government in production and shipment of dried-egg powder sent abroad under the lend-lease program.

Hugh F. O'Donnell, special assistant United States Attorney General, said the convictions were the first obtained in a war fraud case after trial.

The four sentenced, all of them members of two corporations, which were fined a total of $30,000, were:

Julius Cohen, New York City, secretary-treasurer of Samuel Dunkel & Co., Inc., New York City, four years imprisonment on one charge and one year and a day on another. He also was fined $5000.

Charles Cohen, same address, executive of the Dunkel firm, three and one-half years on one charge and one year and a day on a second, and $5000 fine.

Carl Ebbighauser, New York City, manager of the Dunkel concern, and Sidney S. Atlas, New York City, manager of the Sondra Egg Products Corp. Plant at Walton, one year and a day each and $1000 fine each.

The Dunkel concern was fined $20,000 and the Sondra corporation $10,000.

Jacob Ferber of New York City, who pleaded guilty August 2 to to conspiracy indictments, was given suspended sentences of six months.

One Carload of Oranges Here; First to Arrive Since Oct. 12

A solitary carload of California oranges, the first since October 12, arrived in the District yesterday but offered little immediate relief to the orange-hungry public.

Wholesalers got small portions each, and they in turn will release minute quantities of the fruit to retailers.

In the meantime Food Distribution Administration revealed that a total of 17 carloads of oranges had arrived here so far this month compared to 81 carloads and 13 truckloads arriving during the same period last year. Actually, however, more oranges have arrived in the District since January 1 this year than during the comparable period either in 1941 or 1942.

Since January 1, 1943, 1084 carloads have pulled in. In 1941 during the same period only 742 carloads arrived and in 1942, 798 carloads.

Meanwhile, John L. Laskey, District OPA chief counsel, is investigating charges of above-ceiling selling in the orange market. No large scale operations have been uncovered, he said yesterday, but arrest of an itinerant peddler on price violations charges is expected shortly.

In addition it was reported that District OPA officials "have reason to believe" that many wholesalers, already under indictment for black market activities, are continuing their illegal practice while awaiting trial.

Holman Would Give D. C. Right to Pick Own Government

Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon yesterday indicated that he will introduce a bill early next week—possibly Monday—providing that District residents should be granted a charter commission to choose their own form of government.

Holman, who became interested in District administration affairs when he was appointed chairman of a Senate District Subcommittee investigating Gallinger Municipal Hospital, declared that he will present the measure as soon as its drafting is completed to set up the complex machinery permitting Washingtonians to go to the polls.

Already before the Senate and referred to the District Committee, is a bill by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, which would give residents the power to vote for a seven-man board of Commissioners who would appoint a city manager.

Churches Sponsor Programs On Outlook for Christianity

Washington churches are sponsoring many Sunday and daily discussion programs designed to broaden churchmen's outlook on religion, and to help create public opinion for a Christian World Order.

Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw., tomorrow will launch a series of discussions on "Makers of American Christianity," stressing the more important religious movements from the beginning of colonization to the Revolutionary War. "Creative Forces in American Christianity" will be discussed tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Eastern Presbyterian Church, 6th and Maryland ave. ne., is sponsoring a Sunday evening "Family Night" service on the theme of "Adventures in Global Thinking." Dr. Kenneth Landon, Far East Presbyterian missionary, will speak tomorrow night. The program will open with a light supper at 6 p. m., followed by a followship "sing" and the main address.

VINCENT

A midweek school of adult Christian Education will begin Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol st. Courses and leaders are:

"Recreational Leadership," Sister Pearle N. Lyerly, parish deaconess; "Religion and Health," Protestant Chaplain Joseph L. Schantz of Gallinger Hospital; "Christian Ideals of Love and Marriage," Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren; "Home Nursing," Mrs. John A. Lucas, assistant director, Red Cross Home Nursing; "Introduction and Outline of the New Testament," Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Reformation Lutheran pastor, and "Great Men and Women of the Christian Church," the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, Reformation's associate pastor.

Rhode Island Avenue Methodist young adults' School of Christian Living will continue tomorrow night, with the Rev. J. F. Minnis, missionary on furlough from Dhulia, India, speaking at 8 o'clock. Courses in personal religious living, Christian family life and other subjects will be held earlier.

Subjects being discussed at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church's School of Christian Living on Sunday nights include postwar problems, juvenile delinquency, dramatics, race relations, courtship and marriage, public speaking and others.

BUSCHMEYER

Dr. Herbert Ramsey, a practicing physician, will address the second in a series of discussions on "City Lights and Shadows" tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. at Emory Methodist Church. His theme will be "The Psychology of Healthy Living." The young adults are sponsors. Supper is served at 7:15 p. m.

Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will speak Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Brookland Methodist Church on "The Religious Bases of a Lasting Peace," second in a series of six Wednesday discussions on "The Churches and Lasting Peace."

Dr. G. H. Moore Called for Revival

Dr. George H. Moore, pastor of the South Main Street Baptist Church, Greenwood, S. C., will be visiting pastor-evangelist at the Chevy Chase Baptist Church beginning Monday evening for two weeks. Dr. Moore has held pastorates in Florida, Kentucky and South Carolina. The services at 8 o'clock every evening are in conjunction with the city-wide Baptist evangelistic campaign of some 30 Baptist churches. The campaign will be inaugurated by the pastor, the Rev. Edward O. Clark, tomorrow evening when, with the assistance of Miss Ruth Jackson, he will give a cartoon sermon entitled, "Man and Eternity." Harold S. King, noted conference song leader, will have charge of the special music of the campaign.

Prof. Barrois to Talk

Prof. Georges Barrois of Princeton University, will preach tomorrow at 4 p. m. at services of the Washington French Congregation at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square.

Central Church Will Install Mr. Mansell

The Rev. William F. Mansell, called to become pastor of Central Presbyterian Church to succeed Dr. James H. Taylor, will be installed tomorrow at 11 a. m. In accordance with the rule of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Dr. Taylor, having reached the age of retirement, has been made pastor emeritus.

MANSELL

Mr. Mansell has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Vicksburg, Miss., for the last three years. He is a graduate, with the degree of A. B., from King College and with the degree of B. D. from Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va. Later he took his master's degree in theology from the same institution. On October 6, 1943, his letter of transfer from the Presbytery of Central Mississippi was received and he was enrolled as a member of the Presbytery of Potomac.

The commission appointed by Presbytery to install Mr. Mansell consists of Dr. Taylor, the Rev. Fred V. Poag of the Second Presbyterian Church of Alexandria, the Rev. G. Wilbur Shipley, the Rev. Walker McBath, Elder W. L. Fulton of Central Presbyterian Church and Elder Addison H. Folrnoy of Bethesda Presbyterian Church. By special invitation, Dr. Ben R. Lacy, jr., president of Union Theological Seminary, will preach the sermon.

Dr. Hastings to Talk

Dr. J. Warren Hastings will address the church dinner Thursday at 6:15 in the Vermont Avenue social hall of National City Christian Church, on the theme of "Does God Hide Himself?"

Speakers Will Arrive Today For Evangelistic Campaign

With "Washington for Christ" as their battle cry, the vanguard of speakers will begin arriving today and tomorrow for the city-wide Baptist evangelistic campaign October 17-31 in 30 local and nearby churches.

Additional members of the speaking team from a dozen States will arrive during the week as some must conduct services at home tomorrow. They will address simultaneous evangelistic services in 30 churches.

Dr. Roland Q. Leavell of Tampa, Fla., who has led evangelistic drives in 50 cities, will direct the local mission, and the Rev. James P. Rodgers, pastor of Petworth Baptist Church, will be chairman of the local steering committee.

Among the visiting speakers will be Dr. William Ward Ayer, pastor of New York City's Calvary Baptist Church and well-known radio orator, who will appear at Petworth Baptist Church; Dr. Harold Tribble of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at First Baptist Church; Dr. Clarence Jordan of Georgia, at Calvary Baptist; Dr. Leavell, at National Baptist Memorial Church, and Dr. G. Kearnie Keegan at Luther Rice Memorial Church. (See sermon column and large ad for news of other visiting speakers.)

First Baptist Guest To Be Dr. Tribble

Special evangelistic services will be conducted at the First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., all of next week. The guest minister will be Dr. Harold W. Tribble, professor of theology at the Southern Baptist Seminary in Louisville, Ky. Dr. Tribble will speak at the three regular services tomorrow and each weekday through Friday at 8 p. m. Dr. Pruden will conduct the services.

The special music is being arranged by Harwood Hall, the minister of music. Dr. Tribble is one of the younger leaders among the Baptists and has studied at some of the leading theological institutions abroad.

'Washington Welcomes You Week'

The Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, which had planned to sponsor a "Washington Welcomes You Week," the first week in November, has asked the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade to sponsor such a "week" later, because of the probability of the community-wide scope of such a project.

According to Donald F. Bautz, defense commission director, the commission will continue to be responsible for the churches' participation in the proposed "week." Officials of the Greater National Capital Committee have expressed an interest in the "week," he said, and have indicated that at an appropriate time they will solicit the cooperation of all civic, religious service and trade organizations to assure representative community interest.

"SUN OF MY SOUL"
- - - JOHN KEBLE - - -
Sun of my soul! Thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if Thou be near;
Oh, may no earth-born cloud arise
To hide Thee from Thy servant's eyes!
Be near to bless me when I wake,
Ere thro' the world my way I take;
Abide with me till in Thy love
I live myself in heav'n above.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This poem, describing a benighted traveler, pushing on after the sun has set, appeared in 1827, and ever since has won the hearts of all people for its simple sincerity and love of nature. Every line illustrates the life and character of its devout and pious author.

Church Members: Here's Plan For Cheering Up British Tars

"Bread cast upon waters . . ."

On Thanksgiving Day, 1942, a man and his wife walked into a downtown restaurant for their holiday meal. Seated alone in a corner was a young soldier.

The couple approached the lad and asked if he would like to sit with them. The lad's face lit up, and he joined them. He was a young Jewish boy. His nearest relatives were on Long Island, and he couldn't get furlough to see them over the holidays.

It was one of the happiest Thanksgiving days any of the three had ever enjoyed. But the friendship didn't end there. Each week the married couple get a V-mail letter from the one whom they befriended. He has never forgotten that kindness.

Well, each weekend numbers of British sailors come to Washington on furlough. Naturally, their funds are limited. They know few persons in Washington. They need hospitality. That's where you come in.

If you would like to have one or more of the lads as weekend guests, just fill out the coupon below, and mail to the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, 1751 N st. nw., or phone Miss Jane Sniffen at Decatur 3132.

Catholic U. Omits 1943 Reunion

The annual national reunion and banquet of the Catholic University Alumni Association, which usually is held in the fall in New York City will be omitted this year, in compliance with the request of the Office of Defense Transportation, and instead regional and State chapters of the graduates of the local institution will stage smaller gatherings in their home communities, the alumni association's national president, Andrew P. Maloney, announces.

President Maloney, with the Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, Catholic University director of the association, and National Secretary Norbert L. Behrandt, however, are now completing plans for a Catholic University Forum, under the general theme "America After Victory," which will be held under the auspices of the New York and New Jersey State associations in New York City, early in November.

Plans also are being considered for two dinners to be given by University graduates in honor of the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University; the first to be in New York next month. In December the alumni of Washington, Maryland and Virginia will be host to the university's rector.

Luther Place League To Hear Miss Arnesen

Miss Norma Arnesen of the Commission on American Missions of the National Lutheran Council, will address the young people's Luther League of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. on "Go Preach." A Hallowe'en party is set for Thursday night.

North Carolina Pastor Will Hold Revival

Visiting evangelist at Metropolitan Baptist Church during the city-wide Baptist revival will be the Rev. Vance Hayner of Greensboro, N. C. He will speak tomorrow at 11 a .m. and 7:30 p. m., and daily, except Saturday, at 8 p. m., through October 29. Homer Phillips of the Navy Band will be song leader tomorrow night, and Assistant Pastor John M. Ballbach on other nights.

Dr. Niebuhr Will Start Off Series

The Rev. Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, well-known author, lecturer and professor of applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, will be the speaker tomorrow at 4 p. m. at Washington Cathedral for the first in a series of services entitled "A Service on Behalf of a United People at a Time of National Emergency." These services are sponsored jointly by the Washington Federation of Churches and Washington Cathedral.

Dr. Niebuhr

Canon Smith will preach at the 11 a. m. service at the cathedral tomorrow. At 3 p. m. tomorrow the annual service for the Washington Huguenot Society will be held in Bethlehem Chapel with Canon Draper preaching.

New York Pastor Will Lead Revival

With Dr. William Ward Ayer, pastor of New York City's Calvary Baptist Church, as visiting evangelist, Petworth Baptist Church tomorrow will start its series of services in connection with the city-wide Baptist evangelical program. Dr. Ayer will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m., 6:45 and 8 p. m. Miss Mary Sue Barnette, teacher of piano and organ at Peabody Conservatory of Music at Nashville, Tennessee, will assist with the musical program of the series. Services will be held daily at 8 p. m., Saturdays excepted.

College Head to Preach Here

The Rev. Dr. Conrad Bergendoff, president of Augustana College and Theological Seminary at Rock Island, Ill., will be the guest preacher tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Augustana Lutheran Church.

Dr. Bergendoff is one of the leading Lutheran theologians of our land. Following the Christian World Conferences at Oxford and Edinburgh in 1937, at which he played a large part, the University of Upsala conferred upon him an honorary Th. D. He is a member of the continuation committee of the Faith and Order movement in World Christendom, and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has recently appointed him to a committee of theologians organized to study the relation of Christian theology to the war.

At the evening service at 7:30 p. m. Osborn Hauge of the Norwegian Embassy, will speak on "Our Lutheran Brethren in Norway."

Calvary Revival Leader Will Be Georgian

Dr. Clarence Jordan of Koinonia Farms, Americus, Ga., a missionary farm project, will speak daily at 8 p. m. Monday, through Friday, and also Sunday, October 24, at Calvary Baptist Church, as a feature of the city-wide Baptist evangelistic drive.

Church Building Is 12 Years Old

Christ Lutheran Church will commemorate the twelfth anniversary of the dedication of its present edifice at 16th and Gallatin sts. nw., tomorrow at 9:15 and 11 a. m. A sermon will be preached by the Rev. Karl Maier of Waynesboro, Virginia.

Dr. J. Frederic Wenchel has been pastor of Christ Church for almost 35 years. Clarence Buck is president of the congregation. The church was formerly located on New Jersey ave. and Morgan st.

At 6 p. m. the Walther League will have supper for the young people and their friends, to be followed by a business and a social meeting. The executive board will report the fall and winter program of activities in this meeting.

Dr. C. H. Wesley Guest Speaker

Dr. Charles H. Wesley, president of Wilberforce University, will be guest speaker at Metropolitan A. M. E. Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. Dr. Wesley was formerly a presiding elder of the Potomac District and dean of the Graduate School, Howard University.

The Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Masonry for the Southern Jurisdiction will hold a service in the evening.

Revival at Bethesda

Dr. Gaye L. McGlothlen, Christian Education secretary of the District Baptist Convention of Churches, will speak tomorrow at 10:55 a. m. and 7 p. m., and daily at 8 p. m. at Bethesda Baptist Church, in connection with the city-wide Baptist revival.

Know thou of a truth, these GREAT OPPRESSIONS that have befallen the world are PREPARING it for the ADVENT of the MOST GREAT JUSTICE. The LIGHT of MEN is JUSTICE: QUENCH it NOT with the contrary winds of OPPRESSION AND TYRANNY. The PURPOSE of JUSTICE is the APPEARANCE of UNITY among men. No RADIANCE can COMPARE with that of JUSTICE."

Change Urged In Administration Of Cathedral

A resolution urging that the Dean of Washington—a position now vacant—be given administrative powers over the Washington Cathedral was adopted at yesterday's meeting of the Cathedral Chapter at Mount St. Albans.

Final approval of the resolution awaits the signature of the next Bishop of Washington, who will be elected at a special Diocesan Convention in the near future.

Certain amendments to the Cathedral constitution were proposed last July by the Cathedral chapter, its leaders pointing out that "the discharge of the duties thus placed upon the bishop has proved through the years a task which no diocesan could adequately discharge without injustice to himself and to the work of the diocese . . ."

Suburban Steeple

Calvary Lutheran, 9601 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., of which the Rev. Carl A. Koerber is pastor, will observe its second anniversary tomorrow.

Dr. Geiseman

At 11 a. m. the Rev. J. L. Summers, Charlotte, N. C., executive secretary of missions, Southeastern District, will deliver the sermon on "Anniversary, a Day of Prayer, of Rejoicing, of Rededication." He has served in his present office since 1939.

At 8 p. m. the Rev. Dr. O. A. Geiseman, River Forest, Ill., will be the guest speaker. He obtained his degree from the University of Chicago and Chicago Lutheran Seminary. He is a contributing editor to the Cresset and the American Lutheran, and the author of several theological works. For 19 years he has served his growing congregation in suburban Chicago. He is also a member of the board of directors of the Missouri Synod.

Calvary Lutheran is now worshiping in a storeroom. The congregation plans to build a church after the war.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It took a quarter of a century for Bucky Harris to complete the cycle back to Buffalo, the town from which he vaulted into the big leagues in 1919 . . . he made a lot of the stops, star second baseman with Washington, first pennant-winning manager in the Nats' history . . . a manager also with the Tigers, Red Sox and Phillies, and now . . . he's shuffling back to Buffalo as a minor league manager.

POVICH

It was September, 1919, when Clark Griffith began to hear glowing reports about a kid second baseman with the Buffalo club. He sent Joe Engel, his scout, to appraise Bucky Harris. Engel watched Harris in action for three days but could come to no decision. He was not convinced that Harris could hit.

Griffith, then the manager of the Washington club, made the trip to Buffalo to scout Harris for himself. He timed his visit for the day when Buffalo was playing a doubleheader. That night he bought Harris for $2,500 and First Baseman Hal Janvrin who went to Buffalo in the deal. Griffith had liked what he saw. In ten times at bat in that doubleheader, Harris had banged out eight hits and walked twice.

Five years later, Griffith, now president of the Washington Club, made Harris his manager. That was in the spring of 1924. Harris was 28, the youngest manager in baseball history. Veteran baseball men called the appointment "Griffith's Folly." Harris merely won the pennant for the Nats and then won the world series with the Giants.

At the end of the 1924 season, Griffith signed Harris to a three-year contract. He became the highest-paid manager in the league—$90,000 for the three years. He was now the Boy Wonder, who had outsmarted John McGraw in the World Series and was so unaffected by his managerial responsibilities that he set a new record for assists by a second baseman.

Bucky was never a great hitter with the Nats. But in the stretch of that 1924 pennant race, the Washington players liked to see him up there with men on bases. That's when he hit best. He batted second in the Nats' lineup, a hit-and-run man, who could also lay down a pretty bunt. Pitchers used to call him a pest.

During that pennant-winning season of 1924, Harris had hit one home run. But in the seven-game series with the Giants, he hit two homers and won two of the seven games with them. He batted in seven runs, more than any other man in the series. He was the ideal money player.

Harris wasn't particular how he got on base. If he had to take a pitch in the ribs, that was all right, too. He was clever enough to make it look accidental. He led the league in getting hit by pitched balls in one season. He won a ball game once with his deftness at getting hit.

That was during the 1925 season, when the Nats were driving for their second straight pennant. They were playing the Red Sox in Griffith Stadium. The Red Sox of that era weren't so hot, but the Nats weren't beating them that day. Red Ruffing was the Boston pitcher and it was 2-2 going into the twelfth inning.

Harris was due to bat during the inning, and the Nats had two men on base with one out. On the bench he told the Washington players, "If we get the bases filled, I'm going up there and get hit with a pitch. It's getting dark and I can't hit Ruffing anyway. But if he throws one anywhere close, I'm going to take it."

It happened on the first pitch. Ruffing threw an inside ball to Harris and Bucky, in a seeming attempt to step out of the way of the pitch, got hit on the arm. With the bases filled, the ball game was over.

Harris was courting his wife-to-be that season. She was Elizabeth Sutherland, daughter of West Virginia's Senator Sutherland. The Senator and Miss Sutherland were at the game that day. At dinner that night in the Sutherland home, they were discussing the game. "You know, Dad, I think Stanley deliberately got hit with that last pitch," said Miss Sutherland.

The Senator pooh-poohed the thought. "I don't believe it," he said. "Stanley wouldn't do an unsportsmanlike thing like that."

Bucky lasted until the 1928 season in Washington. The fans who had hailed him as the Boy Wonder in 1924-25 now were booing him because the Nats weren't winning pennants. Griffith released him to take the management of the Tigers. He put in five years at Detroit and then was the choice of Tom Yawkey to manage the Red Sox, which Yawkey had bought in 1933. In his one year at Boston, he finished fourth. When Joe Cronin was bought by the Red Sox from Washington for a quarter of a million dollars, Harris bounced back into Cronin's Washington job.

For eight more years Harris worked happily for Clark Griffith, the most critical club owner in baseball. They parted company again at the end of the 1942 season by mutual agreement. Harris took the job as manager of the Phillies. Pea-Green Clubowner Bill Cox fired him in mid-season. He takes the Buffalo job at a higher salary than he was paid by the Phillies. After Cox and the Phillies, it's probably a step up.

Irish, Duke, Army, Navy, Purdue Favored

By Harold Claassen
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 15.—Making these predictions with the full knowledge that a football officially is described as a prolate spheroid—and therefore never bounces in the expected direction:

Notre Dame over Wisconsin—Some 20,000 fans will see the Badgers pay the penalty for holding Notre Dame to a 7-to-7 tie a year ago.

Duke over North Carolina—The two strongest teams in the Southern Conference will attract 38,000 for the first of their two meetings, which Duke should win after a tough struggle.

Holy Cross over Cornell—No one has scored a touchdown on the Crusaders this season. Cornell probably will, but not enough to win.

Purdue over Ohio State—At least 60,000 Clevelanders will turn out to see the fuss-faced Buckeye civilians bow to Purdue's collection of naval trainees.

Del Monte Preflight over College of Pacific—The Navyators pack too much experience for the Staggmen in game that will draw 14,000.

Camp Grant Favored

Camp Grant over Minnesota—The Gophers have pounded out a pair of easy triumphs over Missouri and Nebraska but the Soldiers aren't 4F. They are expecting 35,000 fans.

Texas Christian over Texas A. & M.—The Aggies may have the smoother team but Texas Christian boasts the most experience and will have the vocal support of 15,000 followers.

Navy over Penn State—The Pennsylvanians haven't lived up to preseason expectations while the Middies are even better than predicted.

Army over Columbia — The Cadets will remain undefeated but they may lose the distinction of not being scored against. The Army's record is luring 25,000 to the game.

Southern California over San Francisco—The Trojans to keep right on rambling to the moans of 15,000 San Franciscoans.

Wildcats Over Sailors

Northwestern over Great Lakes—35,000 will report in hopes that this is the day Otto Graham starts clicking.

Wake Forest over North Carolina State—Not much to choose.

Iowa State over Missouri—The Big Six Club isn't up to par.

Tulsa over Oklahoma—This will be played at Oklahoma City and pits Red Wade of Tulsa against Bob Brumley of the Sooners.

California over UCLA—Rated strictly off their losses to the college of Pacific eleven.

Georgia over Daniel Field—That Cook-to-Smith combination too much for the Fliers.

Pennsylvania over Lakehurst Naval—Philadelphia so hopped up over the Quakers that 30,000 are expected for a game that shouldn't be much more than a workout.

Georgia Tech over Fort Benning—Oh me, Oh my.

S. M. U. on Top Today

Indiana over Iowa—Too much Hoernschemeyer.

Iowa State over Nebraska—The Cyclones get one of their rare wins over the Huskers.

Colgate over Rochester — The Red Raiders did it early in the season on the Rochester grounds.

Maryland over West Virginia—The Mountaineers apparently haven't got it.

Hurrying through the remainder: Texas over Arkansas; Oklahoma A. & M. over Norman (Okla.) Navy; Camp Davis over North Carolina Preflight; Georgia Preflight over Newberry; Colorado College over Kirtland Field; Colorado over Salt Lake City Air Base; Fort Riley over Denver; Kansas over Washburn; Villanova over Bushnell; Carnegie Tech over Lehigh; Tufts over Worcester; Coast Guard Academy over Rensselaer; Richmond over Virginia Military Institute; Louisiana State over Louisiana State ASTP.

Garner Headed For Army Duty

John Garner, District light-heavyweight and middleweight champion, who defends his light-heavy title against Tee Hubert Monday night at Turner's Arena, will enter the Army in the next 10 days, it was revealed yesterday. Garner recently passed his Army physical examination and is awaiting induction.

Hanbury Stops Petro in 7th of Fierce Battle

Danny Down 3 Times in Final Round

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

A couple of local kids fought their hearts out last night at Uline Arena and Lew Hanbury's proved the stronger.

Amid confusion, pandemonium and the threat of a riot at any moment, Hanbury of Northeast, completely outclassed his Southeast crosstown rival, Danny Pietro, and scored a technical knockout in 1:11 of the seventh round, after one of those "ask no quarter and give no quarter" affairs that ended with every person of the virtual capacity crowd standing and screaming.

The end found Danny sitting on the lower strand of the ropes after he had taken two counts of nine. When Referee Marty Gallagher refused to count over him for the third time and raised Hanbury's glove in triumph, Danny protested briefly but bitterly. But even Danny knew he was being saved further punishment and subsided after a few moments.

Not so the crowd, however. Many of Danny's supporters rushed to the ringside and for a few minutes it looked as if a serious riot might result. But Danny, with a great show of sportsmanship, embraced his rival as ring attendants chased ould-be trouble-makers from the ring.

Hanbury Hurt In First

Danny's vaunted left made little if any impression on the strong and willing Hanbury. Danny threw it constantly and it was always a threat with Hanbury respecting it. Hanbury, although he gave the impression of recklessness, was careful not to take any more of those terrific shots than he could help, especially after the first round when Petro threw a barrage of lefts that had Hanbury reeling in his own corner.

Hanbury, as per his promise, concentrated on Petro's midsection, Danny's acknowledged Achilles' heel. It brought the dividends Lew expected and it made the boys who had made Lew a 2-to-1 favorite look like pretty good prognosticators. But along about the fifth round, when Lew decided he had softened Petro enough, he shifted his attack to the face with excellent results.

Gradually Hanbury chopped away at Danny, and first Petro's left eye, tender from a previous fight, became opened. Then Danny's mouth started spitting blood and, eventually, his eyes started assuming that glassy stare that begins to foretell of the end.

And then, in 1:11 of the seventh, Danny could take no more, regardless of whether or not he thought he could. Lew suddenly whipped a hard right to the chin, in a sort of half uppercut and half cross and Danny went down for nine. Again Lew swung in much the same manner and the performance was repeated. And then for a third time—this time with Danny wobbling on the ropes and half way to the floor when the final punch landed. And that was all.

Petro's Body Is Target

For one round Danny looked as though he had a great chance. He flashed from his corner and immediately started pounding Lew's head and body with his trigger-like left hand. Lew's body assumed a reddish hue from the pounding and he was covering up, but he still had enough cockiness left to wink at the front-row spectators.

For two-thirds of that first round, Danny continued to pour in the left hands, and Hanbury continued to take them without winching—to all appearances.

But that was the end of Danny's threat. From the second to the fourth, Lew led with a jabbing left and was crossing a beautiful and hard right that whistled into Danny's stomach with sickening accuracy. Twice in the third round Danny visibly staggered under the impacts and it looked as if he might not go much further.

But in some manner Danny rallied and, as if it had been planned, both rushed from their corner starting the fifth and traded Sunday punches in midring, with Hanbury's the better. Petro staggered. It was the beginning of the end. Three times in the sixth Lew wrestled the tiring Danny to the floor, twice through the ropes and once with a vicious swing when Danny wanted to go into a clinch. Coming out of one such clinch, Lew unloaded a terrific sock to the stomach and Danny all but went down.

Staggers Petro After Bell

As the bell ended the sixth, Lew continued punching and caught Danny flush on the chin and Danny staggered to his corner. Referee Gallagher deducted 2 points from Hanbury's score, but it didn't matter—Lew was on the verge of victory and had won that round anyway.

And then came the fateful seventh and the climax of as bitterly fought fight as one would care to see. Neither Danny nor Lew meant to be rough or unsportsmanlike. They were two kids, rivals since boyhood, fighting it out to see which was the better young man.

The crowd of 4438 plus several hundred soldiers who were admitted free, dropped a neat gross gate of $10,470 into the Goldie Ahearn cash register. Hanbury weighed 133, Petro, 129.

Beginning of the End for a Game Little Warrior

Three times Danny Petro went down before flailing fists of Lew Hanbury in their strictly local fight last night at Uline Arena. Twice he gamely got up and continued, but the third time Referee Marty Gallagher halted proceedings despite Petro's protests. The TKO came after 1:11 of the seventh. Here Petro is shown getting up after the first knockdown. The fight drew a gross gate of $10,470.

Pointer, Setter Share Honors In Field Trials

A pointer and setter shared honors on the first day of the thirty-first annual trials of the National Capital Field Trials Club yesterday on the Mount Pleasant Farm near Potomac, Md.

Dr. Irvin Brotman's setter, Nodelay, turned in an outstanding performance to carry off first place in the all-age stake. The winner was handled by L. L. (Nick) Stephens.

Allegheny Dan, owned and handled by Joseph G. Wiley of Washington, won the Derby.

Today the shooting dog stake will be run and the public is invited to attend. Plenty of parking space is available.

Derby—Won by Allegheny Dan, pointer, owned and handled by Joseph G. Wiley of Washington; second, Peerless McDougal, setter, owned and handled by L. L. Stephens of Quantico; third, Young's Billie II, pointer, owned and handled by Harry D. Wolfe of Baltimore.

All age—Won by Nodelay, setter, owned by Dr. Irwin Brotman and handled by "Nick" Stephens; second, Santee's Pilot, pointer, owned by Curtis C. Marcey of Arlington and handled by H. S. Marcey; third, Ben's Ikey, setter, owned and handled by L. L. Stephens of Quantico.

St. Albans Wins Opener, 41 to 0

St. Alban's picked up from last year's undefeated season by starting the 1943 year with a resounding 41-0 triumph over Charlotte Hall eleven yesterday at St. Alban's.

"Cotton" Smith, Saints' halfback, stole the offensive show, ripping off a 60-yard touchdown run for one of his three scores. He added four extra points, three from placement and one by a plunge. The Saints had matters entirely their own way.

Washington-Lee Wins Over Central, 27-0

5000 Brave Drizzling Rain to See Generals Sweep Over Vikings; Two Scores in 1st Period

The Washington-Lee Generals used their air attack with telling effect last night to crush Central High School, 27-0, at Griffith Stadium. Five thousand braved a drizzling rain to watch the game.

Two of Washington-Lee's four touchdowns came in the first period. Earl took Bill Crandall's punt on the 50-yard line and ran it to the 20. Gerber passed to Earl, who carried the ball within a half-yard of the goal. Gerber went over on a line plunge. Washington-Lee's attempt at conversion failed.

Within the next few minutes of play, Earl caught a short pass from Stevens on the Central 4-yard line and went around right for a 3-yard gain. Earl went through the line for the touchdown. Gerber scored the extra point by rushing.

The third score came in the second quarter when Bill Crunkleton plunged through the Central line to the 3, a 5-yard gain. On another line plunge, Crunkleton scored. Druckenmiller converted.

In the third quarter, Pumphrey caught a 20-yard pass from Earl and ran 10 yards to down the ball on the 1-yard line. Peckham took the ball through the line for the final touchdown. Druckenmiller again kicked the extra point.

The final quarter was played between the 20-yard lines. Central's Bill Crandall tried several long passes, only one of which was completed.

Detroit, Oct. 15 (AP).—Rugged Jose Basora, Puerto Rican welterweight from New York, hammered out an upset 10-round victory tonight over Fritzie Zivic of Pittsburgh before 6000 fight fans at Olympia Stadium. Basora weighed 151¼, Zivic 150.

Mountaineers Favored Over Terps Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 15.—University of Maryland's crippled Old Liners tonight were decided underdogs for tomorrow's clash with West Virginia here with the loss of Charley (Chuck) Schoenherr, husky plunging fullback, who left the squad this week to return to his home to await a draft call. It was the fourth regular the Old Liners have lost since the season opened three weeks ago.

Bill Pirronello, heretofore a 165-pound reserve back, will take over in place of Schoenherr, completing the backfield of Joe Makar at quarter and Charley Ryan and Dick Tushack at halves. A line shuffle may send Les Daly, a regular guard, to end, in place of Wilbur Rock, who will return to his original tackle post after a try at a wing spot.

Kenny Fryer, Mountaineer triple-threater, will be available for Coach Ira Rodgers only part of the game. Fryer was injured, suffering a bruised shoulder and a slightly twisted knee in the Mountaineers' loss to Pittsburgh last week, 20-0. West Virginia also bowed to Virginia, 6-0, while Maryland came back to whip Wake Forest, 13-7, and Richmond Air Base, 19-7, after bowing to the Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters, 13-7, in its opening game.

St. John's Wins Over Tech, 13-6

St. Johns walked off Tech's field yesterday with a 13-6 victory over the Michty Mites after a game that brought into play each team's ability at mud-running and wet-ball handling. The Johnnies were led by pile-driving, triple-threat man George Hughes, who connected on a 39-yard touchdown pass to Handy Hayden and led a formidable series of plays that punched holes in the Tech line.

Longest run of the game was made by Tech Halfback Bob Piker, who ran a cutback play over left tackle from his own 49 stripe to score midway in the second period.

Initial score for the winners came late in the third period when Hughes passed to Hayden for 30 yards from the Tech 40 and after a series of running plays. Fullback Hook set the ball on the 3 and took it over from there. Hughes kicked the extra point.

GonzagaDowns Little Hoyas by 24-to-0 Score

Gonzaga's Eagles added a potent Georgetown Prep eleven to its list of vanquished yesterday after a 24-0 triumph for the high school team that totaled their points for the last two games at 63 to opponents' none. This week's victory over the Little Hoyas and their 39-0 victory over Devitt Prep last week are substantial evidence of their scoring power.

Georgetown Prep made five serious scoring threats and came nearest to pay dirt early in the first period when Bob Beyer led a 60-yard drive that was halted on the Gonzaga 15. Beyer and Halfback Lyons led drives that often reached the 30 before they were choked.

The victors were led by Halfback Hickson, who scored three touchdowns and passed to Coakley for the only other Blue score. Hickson took a pass from Coakley on the 15 after a drive of 30 yards, and put the ball down over the double line for the first 6 points. The same connection gained the second touchdown from the 20 and in spite of a desperate Prepman rally Hickson scored again in the last box.

Landon Routs St. James, 24-0

Landon Prep won its second game of the season and claimed the lead in the Interstate Academic conference yesterday when it defeated St. James of Hagerstown by a 24-0 margin on their home field. Hard driving Preppers playing straight football chalked up a tally in each period to outscore the Maryland boys.

Colts Down Ramblers; Indians Bow

Coolidge High School seems to be headed toward that spot night game at Griffith Stadium November 11, for the Colts yesterday clicked off their third straight interhigh victory, winning over Eastern, 6-0. Western partially redeemed itself yesterday for the 7-0 whipping it took from Eastern last week by beating Anacostia, 13-0.

Roosevelt, also unbeaten, faces Wilson in the spot game of the week at Central today.

Colts Prove Best Mudders, Win, 6-0

It's a good thing the football game between Coolidge and Eastern wasn't played four days ago, before the ban on mentioning the weather was lifted, for the mud which slowed up the play so much couldn't have been included in this story and that mud played a very important part in the game.

Coolidge won, incidentally, 6-0, on a pass from Shullenbarger to Bergman in the fourth period after a blocked kick had given the Colts the ball on the Eastern 7-yard line.

But for the first three periods it was as slow and dreary a ball game as you can imagine. Addie Bassin, the fleet Coolidge back, was no mudder, thought he got off some nice gains.

Those first three periods were mostly a kicking duel between Shullenbarger of Coolidge and Pappafotis of Eastern.

Colts Get Break and Score

It was just at the beginning of the fourth quarter that Pappafotis' kick hit an Eastern player and bounced back for Wayne Marshall of Coolidge to fall on at the 8-yard line. A buck through center gained a yard, then Bassin took it on a reverse to the 1-yard line. Another buck brought no gain and it looked like curtains for the Colts when they were sent back to the 6 on an offside penalty. But Shullenbarger made that fourth down pay off, with a pass to Bergman, who was waiting on the 3 and took it over. Webb missed the kick.

Western Wins Over Anacostia, 13-0

Rain-soaked, mud-bedecked Red Raiders swam to their second interhigh victory and trounced a light, hard-fighting Anacostia eleven 13-0 yesterday in the losers' stadium.

After scoreless trips up and down the field by both teams, Western's Ranny Bishop intercepted the squirming pigskin passed by Flea Flaherty in the first play of the second half and was hit on the Anacostia 29. On the next play Bill Stratos was away with a clear field, but Flaherty stalled the score by tripping the Western fullback. A 15-yard run by Bishop and a pass from Stratos to Quarterback Tom Harwood put the ball on the 1-foot line, and from there Stratos plunged across the double line to score. Bishop booted the extra point while Stratos held.

An interception again set the ball up for the second Raider score early in the fourth period when Stratos intercepted another Flaherty pass on the Indians' 11 stripe. A pass play lost 4 yards, but Bishop bulldozed his way to the 4, where Bryan Bell added 3 more yards. Bishop dove over right guard from the 1-yard line to chalk up the thirteenth point.

Dead Man in Lineup

Reported Killed, Lakehurst Grid Player to Oppose Penn

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 15.—A year ago on a misty island in the South Pacific a Marine captain stepped over the form of a fallen paratrooper.

"He's dead," the officer muttered, and walked on.

The paratrooper later was officially reported killed, but he will be one of Lakehurst Naval Air Station's main hopes against the University of Pennsylvania football varsity on Franklin Field tomorrow.

PFC. John Dudenake, 21, of Pocatello, Idaho, fully recovered from his wounds, is "A spunky football player with plenty of promise and an especially good man on defense," says Lakehurst's coach. Lieut. Comdr. A. H. (Mel) Elward.

Dudenake, now training as a parachute rigger, reported for football practice only two weeks ago.

"I want to play football because it gets my mind off what I've seen and been through," he told Elward.

A reserve guard, he won't be in the starting line-up tomorrow, but Elwards says there is no doubt he will play.

Telling of his injury, Dudenake says:

"An explosive shell struck my rifle and the fragments showered into my neck and throat. Later, as I lay there, a captain passed over me and said, 'He's dead.' I was unable to talk and don't blame him for thinking I was dead.

"At last I could move and I jumped up and started shooting again. An officer yelled at me, 'Get off this island before you get killed.' Two hospital corpsmen carried me to the boat."

Greentree Stable's Broad Grin Captures Jenkins Stakes

Smolensko, Favorite, Runs Second

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Oct. 15.—The Greentree Stable, owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney, First Lady of American racing, made its presence felt in the juvenile division today when Broad Grin, coupled with Clansman in the betting, was the winner of the $5000 added Spalding Lowe Jenkins Stakes, annual 2-year-old mile and a sixteenth test usually contested over Laurel Track.

While the crowd of approximately 12,000 was sending the money in on R. Sterling Clark's Smolensko, the Greentree pair was allowed to go postward at slightly better than two and one-half to one to return $7.60. Broad Grin completed the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track in 1.47 2-5.

Broad Grin's score represented the second stakes victory of the meeting for the Greentree Stable. Earlier in the week Shut Out had scored in the Laurel Handicap. The Jenkins was Broad Grin's initial stakes score and victory netted the bay son of The Porter and Delight $4850.

Edemgee, which finished third, set the early pace with Broad Grin and Blue Wings in closest attendance. Blue Wings faltered early but Porter Roberts kept Edemgee going almost to the end where Arcaro sent Broad Grin to the lead and then went to a hard drive to hold the fast closing Smolensko safe. Clansman, coupled with the winner closed some ground and showed a good effort.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOOD SPIRIT, $5.80, $4.10, $3.40; LEO'S LORRAINE, $54.40, $31.20; APPEAL AGENT, $18.20.

WOOD SPIRIT raced outside from start, responded when shaken up and came with good energy to dispose of LEO'S LORRAINE in final stages. LEO'S LORRAINE was well placed from start, raced APPEAL AGENT into defeat to take command, but could not resist winner. APPEAL AGENT set good pace, but weakened in final stages.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 12:36. Off at 12:36½. Winner, Mrs. R. Heighe's ch. g. (3), by Aethelstan II—Sparky. Trained by J. W. Mergler. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARKER, $23.70, $11.20, $8.00; FOLD UNDER, $10.80, $7.10; BLICKY BOY, $5.40.

SPARKER, well placed from start, swung wide for stretch run, responded to pressure to take command in midstretch and held FOLD UNDER safe. The latter showed good speed throughout, was forced to take the overland route and was going best of all at the end. BLICKY BOY, after setting pace for more than a half, weakened in closing test.

Daily Double, WOOD SPIRIT and SPARKER, Paid $148.10.

THIRD RACE—Two and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1200; steeplechase; claiming. For 4-year-olds and up. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:06. Off at 1:06½. Winner, Brookmeade Stable's ch. g. (7), by Dan IIII—Arcardia. Trained by A. White. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:32⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANNY DEEVER, $6.80, $3.00, $2.70; PICO BLANCO II, $4.40, $3.20; BENEKSAR, $3.70.

DANNY DEEVER, well placed while under stout restraint, moved to leaders when asked, took command while fencing well, bobbled slightly at final fence, but had enough to outlast PICO BLANCO II. The latter set brisk pace while fencing faultlessly, gave way at final fence and then came again on flat. BENEKSAR, showing good effort, moved to pacemaker after being reserved early, was hard ridden while losing ground in closing test and faltered after last jump.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2000; handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 1:37. Off at 1:38. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. g. (3), by Lawrin—Gallienne. Trained by R. O. Higdon. Value to winner, $1400; second, $350; third, $200; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGISLATOR, $5.00, $2.80, $2.30; NEW MOON, $3.30, $2.70; HADAWIN, $4.00.

LEGISLATOR took command early under slight ursging, was under restraint while holding lengthy advantage and was never threatened, winning as rider pleased. NEW MOON, in first flight from start, held on well and was next best. HADAWIN, slow to reach best stride, closed willingly under pressure. PICCADILLY was pinched back leaving half-mile pole.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $5000 added; the Spalding Lowe Jenkins. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:06½. Off at 2:07. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. c. (2), by The Porter—Delight. Trained by J. M. Gaver. Net value to winner, $4850; second, $1000; third, $500; fourth, $250. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROAD GRIN, $7.60, $3.10, $2.50; SMOLENSKO, $2.70, $2.20; EDEMGEE, $3.70.

BROAD GRIN, always in first flight, was steadied for a half, improved position on outside in final stages, disposed of EDEMGEE in early stretch and then held SMOLENSKO safe. The latter, slowest of all to get under way, was allowed to settle into best stride, took the overland route and was going best of all at the end. EDEMGEE went to front at once, drew out in opening quarter, but faltered badly when challenged by winner.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2500. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily, place driving. Went to post at 2:35½. Off at 2:36. Winner, Calumet Farm's ch. g. (3), by Stimulus—Lady Peace. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $1650; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SON OF PEACE, $2.80, $2.30, out; FOUR FREEDOMS, $3.30, out; HASTEVILLE, out.

SON OF PEACE, much the best, was on the extreme outside from start, was not asked for speed until reaching stretch and then drew clear under strong hand ride. FOUR FREEDOMS, well rated, while setting pace, held on gamely in drive. HASTEVILLE trailed and caught a tired horse.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:06½. Winner, W. W. Waters' gr. g. (4), by Belfonds—Luna Mica. Trained by W. W. Waters. Value to winner, $1000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BELMIKE, $5.00, $2.90, $2.20; MASON DIXON, $4.60, $2.70; CAMILLE, $2.70.

BELMIKE, under stout restraint while following pace, moved to lead on the outside and drew clear rapidly while under a hand ride. MASON DIXON lacked speed for a half, went between horses while improving position, reached leader entering stretch, but could not stay with top one. CAMILLE set pace after disposing of TAKE COURAGE, was hard ridden in closing drive, but weakened.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:35½. Off at 3:36. Winner, H. Castle's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR SHY, $9.80, $5.10, $3.50; SENATE, $7.20, $5.00; COBEGGO, $4.00.

WAR SHY was steadied while racing with ELMO GRIER, was taken under restraint when COBEGGO moved up and came willingly in closing stages to win with something in reserve. SENATE was within striking distance from start, responded to urging and closed with good energy. COBEGGO moved up boldly to take command, but weakened in final 70 yards.

Sound Advice

Policeman George M. Stewart, charged with assaulting his mother-in-law, was acquitted by a jury in five minutes in Municipal Court. When Mrs. Minnie Halliwell, the mother-in-law, was questioned about interfering with Stewart's home life, she asked Attorney Charles E. Ford, "What would you do?" Ford replied, "I'd mind my own business."

On His Way

Paul Green, 22, Negro, Brooklyn, N. Y., was charged with disorderly conduct in a bus terminal here. "I'm very anxious to get to my draft board so I can start fighting the Japs, only I was too anxious I guess," Green said. Judge Thomas D. Quinn laughed and replied, "I'll speed you on your way." Green was released on his personal bond.

To Back Appeal At Mayflower Luncheon Today

Washington women will today testify to their support of the $4,800,000 Community War Fund campaign at a Metropolitan Division luncheon, sponsored by 67 women's organizations, at the Mayflower Hotel, 1 p. m.

The Government and Business and Finance Divisions, meanwhile, called for 100 per cent participation in the three-fold drive for funds to aid servicemen, United Nations' sufferers and the home needy, as rallies were held all day yesterday throughout the city.

Employes of the Federal Security Agency, the Government Printing Office, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Alien Property Custodian and the Publications Division of the War Department all heard fund workers reiterate the need for 20 per cent increases in last year's donations.

Emergency Meeting

Gathering momentum in their drive for $1,350,000 of the Washington quota, leaders of the Business and Finance Division held an emergency meeting yesterday in the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. auditorium.

Sectional chairmen told their division head, John L. Vandegrift, that despite the fact that first reports indicated slow response of business firms to fund solicitation —only 9.6 per cent of their quota has been collected—they were now fully organized. Pledge increases of from 20 per cent to 200 per cent were promised.

Vandegrift asserted, "We've got a tremendous job to do before the 21st when Metropolitan will take over the city. We must make sure the business field is covered and covered well."

Check For $1200

Meanwhile, it was reported that Coleman Jennings, chairman of the fund drive here, had received a check from the Variety Club for $1200, representing the 20 per cent increase over last year's gifts which is being asked of all fund contributors.

At the women's club luncheon today, generous gifts to the fund will be called for by Walter Lippmann, columnist, and Lieut. Comdr. Mildred McAfee of the WAVES, who will preside.

Other speakers will be Mrs. Lippmann, Mme. Alexander P. Loudon, wife of the Ambassador to the Netherlands; Coleman Jennings, fund chairman; E. K. Morris, chairman of the Metropolitan division, and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, educational division chairman. Music will be by the band from the Boys Club of Washington.

To Be Represented

Among the groups to be represented at the luncheon the largest schedule in behalf of the fund will be:

Soroptimist Club, Zonto Club, Congressional Club, United Daughters of the Confederacy, Randolph-Macon Women's College Club, Vassar College Club, Mount Holyoke Club, American Association of University Women, Elmira College Club, Catholic Daughters of America, Friends of Yugoslavia, United French Relief, Friends of Poland, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, Friends of Norway, Friends of the Netherlands, Friends of Great Britain, Friends of Luxembourg, Friends of Greece, Canadian Legation, Women of Arlington, United Nations Forum, Women's City Club.

Business and Professional Quota Club, Sweet Briar College Alumnae, Junior League, Women's Institute of Professional Relations, Chevy Chase Women's Club, Newcomb Club of Bethesda, American Association for Adult Education, Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington, Phi Delta Delta, Women's Bar Association, Wheston College Club, Goucher College Alumnae, Washington Federation of Women's Clubs, Simmons College Club, Women's Auxiliary to the D. C. Medical Society, Parent-Teacher Association of Washington, YWCA, Twentieth Century Club, Bethesda USO, Bethesda Women's Club, B'nai B'rith, Civilian Defense Volunteers, Business and Professional Club of Hadassah, Friendship Home and the Chinese Embassy.

Oversubscription Asked

At a joint meeting of employes of the FDIC and the APC in the National Press Building auditorium, Hugh Willett, jr., executive director of the fund, called for oversubscription of the group's quotas, $2835 and $6883.

"Put yourself in the position of those whom fund dollars assist," he urged, as he cited the juvenile delinquent rehabilitated by Boys Clubs, the serviceman who wants a bed, not a bunk," the homeless Greek who needs food for life—all assisted by fund donations.

FDIC director Phillips Lee Goldsborough declared, "there is no pressure on anyone to give to the Community War Fund. Your own honor and your conscience is to be your judge. This money has got to be raised, and we're depending on you not to falter."

James E. Markham, deputy Alien Property Custodian, also appealed for generous gifts, citing the three fronts which the Fund is supporting this year.

A special appeal for United China Relief was made yesterday to employes of the Publications Division of the War Department's Adjutant General's Office by William R. Johnson, a former missionary who spent 36 years in the Orient.

Millions of Homeless

Johnson, who returned to the States on the Gripsholm after being interned in a Jap prison camp, told of China's millions of homeless and what Fund donations had done for them in the past.

"We are asked to do something for these people who have borne our burdens for some time," he stated. Urging unselfishness, he called upon his audience to "recognize your responsibilities and give till it hurts."

Room-to-room rallies were held yesterday in the composing division of the GPO, with Coleman Jennings and Claude M. Baker, president of the International Typographical Union, as speakers. Also rallying to fund support yesterday were employes of the Federal Security Administration.

Levin Admits Black Market Exists Here

Although he asserted black market operations in meats were "prevalent" in Washington, Aaron Levin, executive secretary of the Independent Food Distributors of D. C., Inc., yesterday stated that he was unable to name specifically wholesalers or retailers who had participated in such practices.

Levin, who appeared before District OPA Enforcement Attorney John L. Laskey, was the first person to be subpenaed by the OPA for testimony on the basis of a newspaper report. He was questioned for definite information on general statements he had issued Wednesday on local black market dealings.

Only Bits of Conversation

Admitting in each instance that the illegal practices he cited were described to him by dealers with whom he conversed, Levin, nevertheless declared "I can't name them because I don't know their names. I only remember bits of conversation."

He added, "Without specific information on my part it would be foolhardy for me to make charges. But the statements attributed to me in that article are common knowledge."

Levin later stated that he didn't recall all the charges he had made during the interview to which Laskey referred. He did say, however, that while food violations are not as widespread today, they are still "prevalent to a certain degree."

When Laskey criticized meat dealers for permitting such practices to continue, Levin explained that they must support unscrupulous wholesalers in order to survive.

"A clear understanding as to the reasons why a dealer commits such practices would make the practices justifiable," he said, although he earlier told Laskey his group urges stores to comply with price and rationing regulations.

Victory Sidelights

New Paper Collection Today In District Salvage Drive

Second monthly collections of waste paper salvage begins today in the Southeast area, with officials anticipating larger totals as citizens familiarize themselves with the custom of placing waste for pickup befor 9 a. m. in the morning.

Meanwhile the salvage office announced yesterday that the largest defense area collection was made in Greater Woodridge—33,990 pounds. This was more than double the second greatest total, 16,874 pounds, collected by southeast. Other large collections were made by Petworth, 15,625 pounds; Friendship, 15,280 pounds; Brookland Dahlgren Terrace, 12,875 pounds.

Funds realized by sale of paper collected are being used for public services. Southeast will donate its money to the civilian defense committee. The P-TA at Janney School will receive funds from Friendship.

The Salvage Committee says paper may at all times be donated to the Salvation Army by calling Metropolitan 2284 or to other charity collecting agencies.

MPs to Be Guests

Thirty-nine members of Company D, 703 Battalion Military Police who took part in the recent Back the Attack show will be guests of honor at a dance to be given at the Arlington Recreation Center, 3150 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va., tonight by the Republican Women's Council of the county. Each will receive a gift to mark the occasion.

Lieut. Stern Visits Here

Second Lieut. A. Edwin Stern, jr., former Post copy boy, now a bombardier-navigator with the Army Air Forces, arrived in Washington yesterday on a 10-day leave before going overseas.

While here he will stay with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Edwin Stern, 3101 Chesapeake st. nw. Lieut. Stern, a graduate of Central High, enlisted in the Army Air Forces December 19, 1941. He won his wings eight months ago. He has made one forced parachute jump from 1000 feet.

2 Engraving Laborers Get Jail for Theft

Two former Treasury Department laborers were sentenced to jail by Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court yesterday for stealing 4000 $1 bills from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Ernest Talford, jr., 17, received a sentence of 1 to 3 years imprisonment; and Clifton A. Hall, 43, 16 months to 4 years. Both are Negroes. A third man, who pleaded not guilty, awaits trial.

Hall had served 9 years for grand larceny before being employed by the Treasury. Justice McGuire called Hall's employment "sheer stupidity."

Justice McGuire also sentenced Thomas H. Adams, 20, Negro, to 2 to 6 years imprisonment on charges of housebreaking and larceny in nine instances.

Justice David A. Pine imposed 2 to 7 years imprisonment on Howard Simpson, 52, Negro, of 227 C st. sw., who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the ice-pick killing of a 49-year-old Negro woman.

Benjamin Shenker, 30, who is serving 9 months for illegally wearing an Army captain's uniform and hero's decorations daily after finishing work as a grocery store manager, was given 8 months to 2 years, for perjury in failing to state on a marriage application here that he was married already.

Joseph M. Fagins, 18, Negro, and Harry Johnson, 38, Negro, each got 6 to 18 months for draft evasion.

Consent of Parents NeededtoInoculate For Diphtheria

The District of Columbia is unable to force parents of school children to submit their offspring to diphtheria immunization through vaccination, the Health Department admitted yesterday.

Confronted with objections by some parents to the campaign in progress to give school children up to 8 a 'step-up-dose" as a preventive to the disease, the Health Department said the "only immunization that is compulsory is that for smallpox."

The Health Department said the present campaign is not based on any law, but is purely one of recommendation by the department's doctors. While there have been parents who oppose the vaccination, it was said, the "great majority freely submit their children to the immunization vaccination."

Mason Plans To Probe Nurse's Death

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Commissioner Guy Mason, himself under fire of a senatorial District Subcommittee, yesterday announced he was undertaking a thorough investigation of the death of Miss Addie Mae Carroll, Gallinger nurse, who died 10 days after her release from Gallinger.

With the death certificate signed by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, and giving the cause of death as diabetes, before him, together with statements from Gallinger physicians hinting that Miss Carroll committed suicide, the Commissioner conferred with the coroner, but would not divulge the nature of their talks.

Mason said he could not fix a date for completion of his investigation "due to press of other business."

Meanwhile on Capitol Hill, Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee indicated that there would be a three or four-week delay in holding a full committee meeting to consider the Gallinger report by a special subcommittee because two important members—Senators Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland and Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota—will be out of town.

McCarran guaranteed, however, that there would be no unnecessary delay in scheduling a meeting as soon as a suitable day can be chosen.

Later in the day, Dr. MacDonald asserted, emphatically, that he was standing firmly back of the death certificate which he signed.

Mason said that he intended receiving "several more reports" before he would be in position to make public his own findings.

Mason's announcement followed closely a statement issued by Senator Bushfield, author of the report criticizing Mason and Gallinger officials, to the effect that the Carroll case would bear considerable investigation in view of the conflicting versions of the nurse's death.

"It is my understanding that Dr. MacDonald is a competent and conscientious public official," the Senator said. "His death certificate was based on facts as actually revealed by an autopsy report and chemical tests. I do not think there was any guesswork there."

While these developments were under way members of the administrative staff of the Health Department yesterday presented to Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, a large bouquet of flowers accompanied by a note expressing their "complete loyalty and confidence in your administration and outstanding accomplishments."

Presentation of the bouquet, which occurred when Dr. Ruhland returned here from a meeting of the American Public Health Association in New York, followed the publication of a report recommending the removal of Dr. Ruhland and several others because of conditions unearthed during an investigation of Gallinger Hospital.

British Crewmen Honor Memory Of Anna McGowan

The late Miss Anna McGowan, who as a Washington girl used to go to sea with her father, the late Admiral John McGowan, USN, in the days when such practice was allowed, was honored yesterday by the crew of HMS St. Mary's.

Comdr. Edward C. Hulton, Royal Navy, placed a wreath on her grave beside that of her father in Arlington Cemetery, on behalf of the men serving on the St. Mary's, formerly the USS Doran, one of the 50 destroyers given to Great Britain by this country.

Miss McGowan's memory was honored because up to her death on March 16, this year, she used to supply the men with books, knitted garments and other presents. Her interest in the Doran was because it was named for a ship of the same name she and her father used to sail.

The McGowan family for years lived at 1420 16th st. nw. The Admiral died in 1934.

Queues Formed At Liquor Store To Buy Whisky

Scotch, rye, bourbon and blends, of late scarcer than spring water in the Sahara, were put on sale yesterday at the Star Liquor Store, 513 11th st. nw., and by the size of the mob that quickly formed, one might judge the stuff was evaporating.

Would-be customers clamoring at the door were quickly formed into queues and were let in in two's and three's.

Manager Herman Bachrach was reticent about the source of his supply and the quantity thereof. He did insist, however, that at one bottle to a customer, he would have enough for all.

D. C. Business Leaders Pick Chiefs

Schwartz Defeats Derrick in Close Race for President By 51-to-48 Vote

Max Schwartz, wholesale radio dealer, last night defeated Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, for the presidency of the D. C. Federation of Business Men in a hotly contested battle. Schwartz replaces William J. Mileham as leader of the organization.

SCHWARTZ

Final tally gave Schwartz 51 votes to 48 for Derrick. Derrick was elected first vice president unanimously.

Schwartz, who lives at 718 Shepherd st. nw., is a member of the Masonic order. He is first assistant chief of air raid warden for the District; president of the Parkview Business Men's Association and chairman of the Roosevelt High-MacFarland Junior High Juvenile Delinquency Association for the northwest area.

Others elected at the meeting, held at the Mayflower Hotel, were: John Leps, second vice president; John Williams, treasurer, and Arthur F. Carroll, jr., secretary.

The federation by unanimous vote accepted the District Retail Liquor Dealers Association for membership.

Prior to the election, the members heard an address by Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican Mayor of Baltimore, in which he stressed the need for organization among businessmen.

"We must stop whining about conditions and act," McKeldin asserted. He quoted Gibbon, the historian, as laying the fall of the Roman Empire to heavy taxation for armament; increase in divorce and a wave of pleasure-seeking among the populace, apparently attempting to paint a parallel.

Shake-up in Army Service Forces Now Effective

By the Associated Press

The reported drastic reorganization of the Army Service Forces finally became effective yesterday in what was officially described as "a minor transfer of activities" in various administrative changes at ASF headquarters.

The principal change was one separating the educational and training functions of special services division from its morale and entertainment activities, the former being shifted to the division of military training under Brig. Gen. W. L. Weibel.

Other changes include:

Army specialized training (the college program) from the director of personnel to the director of military training.

Women's Army Corps shifted from the director of personnel, the WAC director and her staff now reporting directly to the ASF commanding general, the WAC training division going to the director of military training, and WAC housing supply and mobilization activities going to the ASF mobilization division.

Army Exchange Service, which operates the post exchanges, shifted from supply to personnel, since its work is considered more of a morale factor than a military supply problem.

Summer Drought Runs Into Fall; October Very Dry

The long arm of the summer drought that caused millions in crop losses, is reaching into the fall, the Weather Bureau reported last night.

The first 14 days of October recorded only 400th of an inch of rain, whereas October of last year saw 8 inches fall, the bureau said. Rain in the form of occasional showers accompanied by moderate temperatures, was scheduled for today, and the bureau said it was optimistic about the remainder of the month, although it would not predict a rainfall equal to that of last October.

Airline to Interview Stewardess Candidates

Prospective stewardesses for airline service will be interviewed today at the Mayflower Hotel by the Misses Ruth Anderson and Marcella Rheaume, supervisors of stewardess employment for the American Airlines, Inc., it was announced yesterday.

Applicants must be 21 to 28 years old, have four years of college or two years of college plus business experience, be an American citizen and be unmarried and weigh not more than 125 pounds, with height not exceeding 5 feet 6 inches.

Police Absolved

Car, Not Gun, Killed Pet at Colmar Manor

Prince Georges County police last night absolved themselves of any blame in the death of the dog belonging to the daughter of John S. White, attorney, of Colmar Manor, Md., and speaker of the House of Delegates, by the assertion that after an investigation it was learned that the dog died when run over by a car and was not shot.

Earlier in the day both county and Colmar Manor police denied they had shot the dog in the course of the campaign to destroy rabies-infected dogs in the county, as was first reported. He was found in the front yard of a neighbor, where he apparently had died shortly after being hurt.

The dog, Laddie, a 3-year-old black Scotch terrier, was given to Mary Margaret White, the 16-year-old daughter of the attorney, upon her graduation from elementary school. News of his death affected her so strongly she could not attend school yesterday.

Mrs. White said that Laddie had always been kept in the house and thart when let outside was always tied in the yard. Shortly after dark Thursday night the dog was put on the inclosed back porch to eat his dinner and apparently nosed open the back door and got out.

Third Insanitation Charge Costs D. C. Druggist $150

The Health Department, continuing its drive to clean up District food handling establishments, brought Joseph Wollman, operator of a pharmacy at 1738 Connecticut ave. nw., into court yesterday, where he was fined $150 for violations of the sanitary code.

This was the third time within the past eight months that Wollman has been cited for violations. On the other two occasions he forfeited collateral of $25. The warrant charged him with having a slimy icebox on the premises, an abundance of trash, food unfit for human consumption and dirty utensils.

Meanwhile, Dr. R. R. Ashworth, chief of the food inspection division, said the campaign to clean up local bakeries was continuing unabated despite the fact there were no court cases yesterday.

W. Melville Brown, Richmond, Heads Kiwanis District

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—W. Melville Brown of Richmond, was elected governor of the Capital District Kiwanis International at the closing sessions of the twenty-fifth annual convention this afternoon.

Other officers elected were: Secretary-treasurer, Frank B. Walters of Roanoke; lieutenant governors, Martin T. Wiegand of Washington, first division; Marshall Geogehean, Victoria-Kenbridge, second division; Frank Lemmon, Marion, third division; Ernest P. Mangum, Norfolk, fourth division; Frank B. Haynes, Charlottesville, fifth division; Claude B. Hellman, Baltimore, sixth division, and Clisby M. Jennell, jr., of Salisbury, seventh division.

Brown succeeds W. Carey Wheatley of Lynchburg, as district governor.

Last of Teachers Get Pay Checks After Long Delay

The last of the nearly 3500 District public school teachers whose paychecks were delayed received them yesterday at the District disbursing office. The final supplementary payroll contained the names of 152, and the disbursing officer announced all teachers are now paid.

School officials attributed the delay to time required to make computations of victory loans and withholding taxes and the difficulty was further complicated by the fact a large number of vacancies on the teaching staffs were filled after the meeting of the board of education, September 15.

Former Pepco President Gets Regional CED Post

Dr. William McClellan, St. Louis, Mo., formerly president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., here, from 1935 to 1940, has been named regional chairman of the Committee for Economic Development in Region 8 of the Commerce Department, it was announced yesterday.

Region 8 covers Arkansas, and parts of Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi. He is rated as one of the outstanding engineers of the country and has been active for some time in the CED program for providing jobs for returning servicemen.

D. C. Traffic Claims 46th Pedestrian

Mme. Heurdier, 68, Fatally Injured While on Way to Mexican Embassy

Total traffic deaths in 1942 103

Mme. Gabrielle Heurdier, 68, 956 F st. sw., died at Garfield Hospital at 6 p. m. yesterday after being struck by an automobile at 4:20 p. m. at 16th and Oak sts. nw, while en route to the Mexican Embassy, to keep an appointment.

John Grauman, 24, of 1013 DeBeck dr., Rockville, Md., was the driver of the car, police said.

Mme. Heurdier, highly educated and widely traveled, was a native of Lyons, France, and came to this country at the close of the first World War. She lost her property in France when the Nazis occupied the country in the present war and earned her livelihood as a translator. Friends said she was keenly interested in the current movement for the liberation of her native country.

Topic Not Known

Mme. Heurdier met with her fatal accident 10 minutes before her appointment with the Mexican Ambassador, which was set for 4:30. The embassy staff said the Ambassador did not know Mme. Hendier but that she was granted an audience at her request. What the appointment was to discuss was not known, it was said. The accident occurred about seven blocks from the embassy which is located at 2829 16th st. nw.

Mme. Heurdier became the twenty-sixth pedestrian 60 years or more to be killed in traffic accidents here this year. It was recently pointed out that 55 per cent of traffic fatalities here were persons 60 years of age or older. Of the total of 86 traffic deaths, 46 have been pedestrians. Mme. Heurdier was struck while walking from the east to the west curb of 16th st. at the intersection.

Earlier in the day Franklin M. Watkins, 36, of 1725 Trinidad ave. ne., was exonerated by the coroner's jury in the death of Walter Davis, 55, of 1708 F st. nw., who died early Thursday shortly after he was struck in the 3300 block of Benning rd. ne., by a Capital Transit streetcar operated by Watkins

Held Not Responsible

Louis Anderson, Negro, 34, of 1424 F st. ne., defense guard and witness at the inquest, who had Davis under arrest at the time of the accident, was not held responsible for his death in any way.

Anderson, stationed on the Benning Bridge, had removed Davis, allegedly intoxicated, from a westbound streetcar at the request of the operator and was helping him toward a patrol box across the street when Davis fell on the car tracks.

2 Polish Groups To Entertain Tonight

Polish music and refreshments will highlight a meeting of Group 848, Polish National Alliance, and Polish Club of Washington tonight 9 to 12 o'clock in Stansbury Hall, 5832 Georgia ave. nw. The social meeting is open to the public.

City News in Brief

During yesterday's early morning hours the J. B. Spund's Market, Inc., 3423 Connecticut ave. nw., was entered by way of the skylight and two fifths of Scotch and eleven fifths of Canadian Club whisky were stolen. At the same time $16 in cash and seven cartons of assorted cigarettes were taken.

From Sheridan's Restaurant, 2121 Rhode Island ave. ne., thieves got four cases of wine and four of beer, plus an unknown amount of coins from a public telephone there.

No More Arm Rests

A 10-day inspection of police uniforms and property will end today with Inspector Milton D. Smith making an important order —all arm rests on the doors of police scout cars must go!

Inspector Smith, who is in charge of uniforms and police property, discovered during the inspection that more than 40 of the 113 uniform coats no longer usable were worn out at the left elbow and that all of them belonged to scout car men. Hereafter, scout car men will drape their arms over the steering wheel—and all for the sake of the taxpayers who, according to Inspector Smith, own the clothing.

GW Rolls Close Today

Late registrations for the fall term at George Washington University will end at 5 p. m., today, Fred Nessell, registrar, announced, saying the admissions and registration building will remain open to provide for prospective students. He said heavy late enrollments had been tabulated, particularly in the law school.

MAKE IT DO . . .

Homemade Jewelry

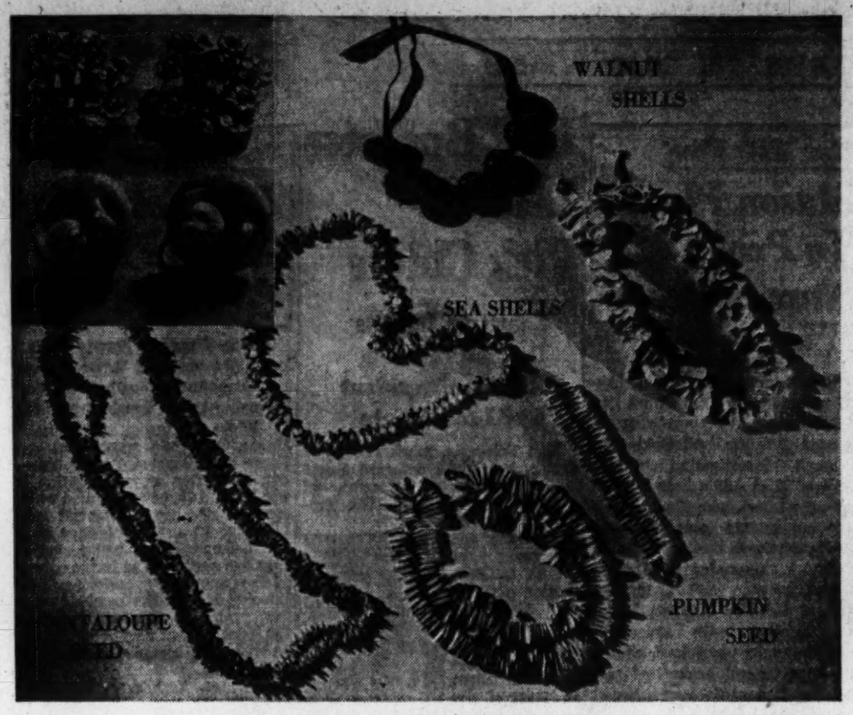
By Ruth Gregory

Some of the most interesting costume jewelry we've seen was never sold over a counter. Hundreds of women, gifted with imagination and patience (a good measure of the latter, let it be noted), have had fun, and saved money, making their own jewelry.

It isn't a new art. We remember our grandmother making beads out of rose petals. She'd put the petals in a jar, allow them to stand until they became black and moist, and then roll them into little balls which she pierce and dried in the sun. They were beautiful and fragrant.

And primitives, past and present, are masters at the art of converting shells, stones, seeds and berries into articles of personal adornment. Here's one place where going primitive makes sense in the twentieth century. Particularly when metal is expensive, and much of it allocated for war needs.

Designers have been turning out non-priority pieces for a long time—using wood, pottery, plastics and even seeds and shells. If you don't like to fuss with handicraft, you can find a fine variety of such costume jewelry in the stores. But if you like to "monkey," here's how:



Necklaces and Bracelets

Seeds, shells and berries are the most common and plentiful natural sources for you. Shiny dried beans, smooth chestnuts, acorns, tiny pinecones, English walnuts can all be converted into gay and attractive costume pieces.

We wouldn't suggest you try to do anything with hard-shelled English walnuts unless your husband has a workshop where you can have access to a saw and vice. But if you have the equipment to slice through them, you'll have an interesting pattern for a bracelet, necklace, even a belt.

Seeds should be strung while they are still soft—before they dry out. Paint them with bright nail polish or Easter egg dye and string them on heavy twine (waxed dental floss makes a good strand for them.) You can get catches in the dime store, or sew on a tie of grosgrain ribbon.

Earrings

That old button-box of yours may have the makings for an assortment of interesting earrings. These are very easy to make and take little time. Get yourself some glue and some earring bases at the dime store, pick out your most interesting buttons and glue them to the bases. The flowered buttons in the photographs were converted into earrings in two minutes flat.

Your jewelry box, likewise, may contain some broken or tired pieces that have been gathering tarnish. Those antique-looking earrings in the photograph were links of a bracelet. Remember to save all clasps and earring backs—saves you a trip to the ten-cent store when you get the restoration impulse.

Once you get started on this homemade jewelry business, there's no end to the ideas that'll pop into your head. Incidentally, if you become adept enough at this art you'll be able to turn out some interesting and individual Christmas gifts.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

"Detained at business" is a valid reason for not serving a meal with sophisticated airs—one of the advantages of being a business girl.

Martha Ellyn

While it is all well and good to plan wisely, shop early and reap benefits, yet there are times when best laid plans go askew. You may come home after groceries stores are closed. You ponder what you will eat. The refrigerator offers little. What to do?

Such was the plight of a business girl recently. She arrived at her apartment about 7:30 one evening, tired but hungry. She wasn't in the predicatment of Old Mother Hubbard. Three strips of bacon appeared first in the refrigerator invoice. This was the starting point for an appetizing dish made with little effort. The piece de resistance she dubbed "Skillet Special."

For the benefit of those women who may find themselves in a similar situation, here is the menu of the impromptu meal and recipe for the main dish.

Dinner Menu

Skillet Special
Bread Butter
Tomato-Calavo Salad
Cantaloupe Tea

The "Skillet Special" was made of 3 strips of bacon, 3 small potatoes, 1 medium-sized onion, 1 small green pepper, 1 egg, 1 slice of bread and a bit of bacon fat. This is the procedure by which she made the dish:

SKILLET SPECIAL

Pare 3 potatoes, slice very thin. Peel 1 medium-sized onion and slice very thin. Put a small amount of bacon fat into skillet. Add sliced potatoes and onions. When done and browned nicely, add 1 slice of bread cut into tiny squares with scissors. Add 3 strips of diced bacon. When bacon has cooked and bread has browned, add a bit of chopped green pepper. Adjust heat very low. Break egg over the ingredients in skillet and stir with fork until egg is cooked. Add salt and pepper as desired.

When caught short on food supplies try improvising such a dish as a "Skillet Special." It's delicious, nourishing, easy to toss together when the hour is late and a ravenous appetite must be appeased. Pictured here are the ingredients used in this make-it-do special

Recently one of my male readers called to offer his findings in concocting a breakfast dish from left-over food. He had made a dish he calls Lamb Navarro—a ragout. The fat left in the frying pan after browning the lamb cubes was the starting point for what he reports a delicious breakfast dish. Perhaps you will want to utilize left-over fats in this way, so here are his directions:

BREAKFAST INVENTION

Heat the left-over lamb fat in skillet. Slice a banana into the pan. Drop about a cup of prepared cereal squares into the frying plan. Add ½ cup milk and let mixture cook until thoroughly heated.

If you have just a very few mashed potatoes left over but not enough for making into potato balls, don't discard them. Use them when you make deviled eggs. The milk and butter used in the mashed potatoes will add good nutrition and give the egg mixture a good body. Try this the next time you have a few left-over mashed potatoes and you will always wish for them when making deviled eggs.

Clothing Conservation

Make your clothes do their bit for victory. Conservation of materials is the order of the day.

Here are some DOs and DON'Ts which used to be merely practical aids to good grooming. Now they're a part of your wartime duties.

DO

Brush your clothes daily. Dust and grit weaken the fibers.

Alternate suits. Never wear the same suit two consecutive days. Give the fibers a chance to spring back.

Brush felt hats regularly. Spots and stains should be taken out by a good cleaner.

Turn up the collar of your shirt when you put it in the hamper. A shirt laundered with the collar unfolded lasts longer.

Buy shirts that are well tailored and made of high quality fabrics. In the long run they are the best "buys."

Have your shoes polished often. A good wax polish softens the leather and serves as a protective coating.

Use shoe trees . . . or stuff paper in the toes as the English do.

Use a shoe-horn when you put on your shoes, especially if they are new.

Turn the sweat band of your hat inside out if you've worn the hat on a hot day. This helps the moisture to dry without ruining the hat band.

Roll up knitted ties instead of hanging them.

Have torn linings repaired at once. Have burnt holes repaired immediately.

DON'T

Wear tight-fitting clothes. If your clothes are tight, have them altered. They'll last longer.

Have suits pressed too often. Frequent pressing weakens the fibers.

Put on your shirt immediately after applying a deodorant. Allow the deodorant to dry thoroughly.

Let your heels run down. Crooked heels twist the uppers out of shape.

Put wet shoes near radiators. That dries the leather and paves the way for cracking.

Use a whisk broom for brushing. Use a soft brush.

Yank a tie off.

Wear a tie two days in a row.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR STOVE

By Marianne

"That was a swell dinner," your guests said, and you should take a bow. However, we'll bet the secret of your success isn't entirely due to your artistry with a few potatoes and a bit of seasoning. More credit than you think is due to the now taken-for-granted wonders your stove performs.

You know that the stove you now have must grace your kitchen for the duration. "Making it do" becomes drudgery only when one is unaware of the whys and wherefores of a stove's anatomy.

Installation—

The stove should be installed so that it's perfectly level. (If it's not, that may be the reason your cakes aren't as good as you'd like.) The gas pressure or electric voltage must be properly adjusted. (Low pressure or voltage may be the reason why food seems to take so long to cook.) If in any doubt about these, it's best to have a serviceman check them.

Depreciation—

Try to prevent the surface of your range from chipping. The porcelain surface can stand a great deal of punishment, but sudden changes of heat and cold may cause it to break. If it does, immediately touch up the spot with a porcelain filler. If acid foods are spilled, wipe them up before the acids destroy the surface glaze.

Keep It Clean—

OUTSIDE SURFACES: Don't attempt to clean the stove while it's warm. Use warm water and soap for the surfaces. Never use a coarse scouring powder. Polish metal trim with a dry cloth.

GAS BURNERS: Remove the burners from the stove and brush away food and dust particles with a stiff brush. If openings in the burner are clogged, clean them out with a fine wire. For a more thorough cleaning, you can boil burners (if made of cast iron) for a short time, wash in soap and water, rinse carefully, and wipe dry. Turn them upside down until thoroughly dry.

If you have an electric range, watch two things. Keep the electric units clean by brushing off food particles (after allowing to char) with a non-metallic bristle brush. If desired, the enclosed units may then be washed off. Don't let salt, soap, soda or sugar get on the coils and don't overheat the wires.

THE OVEN: If you own a gas range, leave the oven door open for several minutes after lighting the burner. This lets the moisture that forms escape and prevents rusting. Also after baking, open oven door for a few minutes to dry oven thoroughly. Clean the oven units of an electric range by taking them out, wipe off dust or food with a brush, and keep them from getting wet.

Conserve Heat—

"Don't cook food immediately after removing from ice box. Wait until it reaches room temperature.

Cook several dishes in the oven instead of one, if you have to light the oven.

Don't preheat the oven too far in advance.

When foods come to a boil, lower the gas. Cook in covered utensils.

Heavy handed privates, husky seamen, nimble-fingered teenage stenographers, cocky corporals and tough sergeants have joined with professional USO directors to learn finger painting at the USO institute now in session at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 19th st. nw.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

More emphasis is placed on practice than theory in this comparatively new technique. Students learn how to paint without brushes and how to decorate many types of useful handicrafts. Miss Ruth Faison Shaw, inventor of finger painting, exhibits amateur specimens as she illustrates her technique. Miss Victoria Bedford, her assistant, shows a film, "How Young America Paints." And Miss Dorothea F. Sullivan, group work director at the school, explains the simple equipment and methods.

This course in finger painting is being taught USO workers so that it may aid in the rehabilitation of returning wounded soldiers, as well as provide recreation for the normal. Each day from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. the public can watch the procedure of the amateur artists.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

How to Keep Warm This Winter

Strange as it may seem to anyone who remembers last summer, I have been worrying a lot here lately about the cold, cold winter ahead. Who indeed could do otherwise? Is not someone always saying, ominously," Have you noticed the fur on the squirrels? It looks as if it's going to be an unusually severe winter," or "Did you read where Professor Whoosis said we were in the 30-year cold cycle again?"

Isn't some authoritative persons always obseving, "This coal situation is far worse than we realize," or some jittery woman parroting," I suppose we'll all freeze to death this winter they're sending so much coal to Italy," or some pessimist predicting we'll have to take to bundling to entertain our friends?

Who in the face of all that could do otherwise than prepare for the worst? But how? I was never one with much talent for insulating, doing weather stripping, or rehabilitating furnaces. But here as always, my ever dependable friends the fashion designers have come to my rescue. I can keep warm, they assure me, and at the same time retain my smartness and my glamour.

Fascinators Not Always Coquettish

Their first suggestions however didn't click. Not with me! These were for a supply of allegedly coquettish little shawls and fascinators for indoor wear. Now unfortunately I have as strong a phobia against fascinators as a farm woman who has ever broken ice in a wash bowl has against restoring old houses. It is because in neighborhoods where I have lived I have encountered so many members of the Jukes family wearing such articles of apparel.

Also I am completely lacking in the technique of wearing a shawl. Even a lace mantilla, instead of transforming me into a Spanish siren, makes me a beaten and shivering immigrant fresh from Ellis Island. Naturally I prefer to freeze rather than lose my glamour.

Now, however, the designers have come forward with what I consider a colossal idea. It's fur undies! Latest fashion flash from New York is that fur panties and brassieres are available—also socks cuffed with fur. Zebra fur is considered especially smart for this purpose. Personally I would suggest leopard fur, as I have always felt it would be more effective on most persons if worn out of sight.

Leopard Skin Would Give Confidence

Moreover, think of the psychological possibilities! Think how graceful, how feline, how dangerous you would feel at a party wearing a leopard's skin right over your own! The designers haven't explained how the laundering problem would be met, but presumably they will get together with the ad writers for the soap flakes company who keep hammering it in that any real lady washes her undies every night.

But that is not all the fashion people have to offer in combatting the cold. They also suggest that we use fur afghans when near zero weather arrives. For example, if you have a Persian Lamb afghan around, you can either wrap your feet in it or throw it carelessly over your shoulders. Either pose is equally flattering.

But if you cannot buy a Persian afghan, do not despair. Take one of your discarded fur coats and make it into an afghan. In fact, in this way you might have several afghans, even half a dozen and provide them for your guests as well as yourselves. You see how simple it all is? Excuse me now while I run up to the attic to look over my old mink and chinchilla coats.

Hawaii Delegate Has Birthday Fete

Notables Who Know—and Love—the 'Paradise Of the Pacific' Among Guests at Informal Party

Joseph Rider Farrington, Congressional Delegate from Hawaii, had a birthday anniversary yesterday—his forty-sixth.

Although he was born in Washington and married here, Hawaii is still home to "Joe" Harrington and most of his birthday parties were held at the rambling house in Honolulu which stands and waits for the return of its lively household.

So, in an effort to recapture those pleasant prewar days at home Mrs. Farrington gathered in a number of old friends from Hawaii, for cocktails yesterday afternoon in their home on Kalorama Circle and chatter ran high in reminiscences. Mr. Farrington was decorated with a lei, and Beverly Farrington, young daughter of the house, appeared in Hawaiian costume to do a graceful hula.

Harris & Ewing
MRS. FARRINGTON

It was all very informal, as practically everything is these days. Gen. and Mrs. Charles D. Herron, who know and love the islands, where they lived not long ago, were in the group of guests. Senator Robert La Follette and Mrs. La Follette came in, for the La Follettes and the Farringtons have been friends for years. Mr. Farrigton and Senator La Follette's brother Philip, former Governor of Wisconsin, were roommates in college and it was at the University of Wisconsin that Joe Farrington met Mary Elizabeth Pruitt, who later became Mrs. Farrington.

Ties of friendship were strengthened when the wedding took place and the late Senator La Follette, father of Senator "Bob," turned over his house for a wedding breakfast and reception.

Others in the merry gathering yesterday were the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Norman Littell, former Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Johnson, who hail from California, and, from the Oregon congressional contingent, Representative and Mrs. Lowell Stockman and Representative and Mrs. Harris Ellsworth.

The Farringtons, who have been here less than a year, sometimes yearn for the moonlit beaches, the bright flowers, the easy life of Hawaii, in the days before Pearl Harbor. President and general manager of Honolulu's largest newspaper, Mr. Farrington's career has also included offices of secretary of the Hawaiian legislative committee, member of the first Territorial Boxing Commission, which legalized the sport there, and membership in the Territorial Senate.

Mrs. Farrington, who, like her husband, majored in journalism in college, kept her fingers on the typewriter turning, out "pieces" for the newspaper until the duties of housewife and mother overshadowed in importance a desire for a newspaper career.

Lally–Cone Rites at Ft. Myer

They had planned a large and elaborate wedding later in the fall, but sudden changes in the bridegroom's orders also changed their plans, so early this week in the Post Chapel at Fort Myer, Va., Miss Gloria Alice Cone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Cone of Washington, became the bride of Lieut. John J. Lally, jr., AUS, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Lally, also of the Capital. Chaplain Thomas J. Hanifin officiated at the 2:30 ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends of the family.

The bride was given in marriage by Lieut. John Howard Munhall, AUS. She was gowned in gold crepe studded with gold stars, with a brown valvet hat and accessories and wore a corsage of purple orchids.

Miss Agatha Munhall was maid of honor and only attendant, and Officer Candidate Louis R. Kengla was the best man. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The bride was educated at local schools and attended American University for three years. Lieut. Lally was graduated from the Christian Brothers Military Academy in Albany, N. Y., and for three years before he was commissioned in the Army, attended Norwich University, the military college of New England.

Returns From New York

Mrs. John Howard, who has spent the last two months in New York, has returned to Washington and is at the Mayflower Hotel.

Down That Popular Aisle

. . . recently went Lieut. Tracy Estabrook, U. S. Army Air Corps, and Miss Carolyn Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Monroe Hill. Capt. White And Wife Now Visiting Here

Capt. Joel J. White, USN Medical Corps, and Mrs. White arrived by plane from the West Coast on Wednesday for a several days visit to their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Caleb C. Motz, at their home on Garfield street.

He has just returned to the United States from 15 months tour of duty in the South Pacific theater of war and was in command of one of the naval base hospitals. In the early period of this duty he saw service at Guadalcanal.

He reported to the Surgeon General on Thursday for further assignment and has been given temporary special duty at Norfolk, Va. He and Mrs. White and their two younger children, Virginia Kate and Harrison, will leave early next week for Norfolk. Their other son, Robert Houston White, is serving overseas with the Army Signal Corps.

The Whites have many friends in Washington where they were stationed fror 1929 to 1933 and made their home in Chevy Chase. They spent another four years in Philadelphia which enabled their Washington friends to keep in touch with them, before going to San Diego, where he was stationed when he left for duty overseas.

Virginia Hunt To Be Bride Of Britisher

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eyre Hunt of Washington and Greenwich, Conn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Virginia, to Ralph Josiah Wedgwood. The wedding will take place in Greenwich, on October 25 at 2:30. After November 1 they will reside at 457 Marlborough st., Boston.

Miss Hunt is a graduate of the Putney School and attended Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y. She is now at Miss Abigail Adams Elliott's School for nursery training in Boston. Her father is associate chief of field operations in the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation and her mother is with the American Red Cross national headquarters as an assistant chief of personnel training services to the armed forces.

Mr. Wedgwood is the second son of the Hon. Josiah and Mrs. Wedgwood of Stoke Grange, Stone, Staffordshire, England, and grandson of the late Lord Wedgwood of Balaston. Josiah Wedgwood is the managing director of Josiah Wedgwood & Sons, in Staffordshire.

The prospective bridegroom is also a graduate of the Putney School, 1941. He is a premedical student at Harvard.

Purely Personal

The Minister of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. B. Kleijn Molekamp will entertain this afternoon at a 6 to 8 o'clock party in their Georgetown home.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown have with them for a visit Mr. Stanley-Brown's uncle, James R. Garfield, Secretary of the Interior during the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins has issued invitations for a tea on Wednesday from 5 to 7 o'clock to meet Mrs. Philip Wallace Hiden, registrar of the Order of the F. F. V., 1907-1620.

Col. and Mrs. John Washington Davidge are spending the weekend in Philadelphia, the guests of Mrs. Clement Biddle at her home Biddlebrook Farm, Brandywine Summit. Mrs. Biddle will entertain at luncheon tomorrow for Colonel and Mrs. Davidge.

Lieut. Henry Stillman Taylor and his bride, the former Miss Vivian Stokes, have returned from their honeymoon and are living at Newport, R. I. Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff of London and Newport, formerly of Washington, and of Sylvanus Stokes of Annapolis, Md.

Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Leavitt have with them for a visit his mother, Mrs. A. L. Leavitt of San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. McPherson of Washington Grove, Md., will leave for Chicago tomorrow to attend the convention of the American Welding Society, of which they are both members. They will return to their home the following Sunday.

Mrs. Taylor, Darragh Park Are Married

Of interest to Washington was the wedding in New York on Thursday of Mrs. Nona McAdoo Taylor, daughter of the late William Gibbs McAdoo, Senator from California and Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson Administration, and Darragh Anderson Park of New York, vice president of the Manufacturers Trust Company. The Rev. C. Ivar Hellstrom officiated in the Riverside Church.

The bride is a daughter of the late Secretary by his first wife, who was Miss Sarah H. Fleming of Chattanooga before her marriage in 1885. She died in 1912 and two years later, Mr. McAdoo wed Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the President.

This is the bride's fourth marriage. Her first husband, the late Ferdinand de Mohrenschildt, one-time official of the Russian Embassy in Washington, to whom she was married in 1917, died in 1919. In 1928 she was married in New York to Dr. Edward S. Cowles, psychiatrist and founder of the Body-and-Soul Clinic. This marriage ended in divorce. Her third marriage, to Francis Taylor of New York and London, a great-grandson of Moses Taylor, banker, which took place in Mexico City in 1935, was terminated by divorce in 1939.

Mr. Park is the son of Mrs. William Gray Park of Westbury, Long Island, and the late Mr. Park. He and his first wife, the former Dorothy Hyde of Tuxedo Park, whom he married in Southampton, Long Island, were divorced in 1939. They have two children, Darragh A. Park, jr., now a lieutenant in the Army, and Mrs. Alastair B. Martin.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe To Give First of Lecture Series

"The Larger Significance of the Pan American Movement" is the subject of the lecture to be delivered by Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, on October 20 at 8:30 p. m. on the occasion of the inauguration of the second season of Columbus University's inter-American Institute.

With the purpose of cooperating with other American universities in the promotion of a better knowledge and understanding of the various aspects of international relations on the American continents, Columbus University has established this Inter-American Institute as part of its academic activities.

During the second year of its existence, the institute will conduct a series of monthly lectures on topics of current interest which will be delivered by prominent American and Latin-American speakers. Beginning on the 20th of October, these sessions will be held in the third week of every month through May, 1944.

Dr. Rowe's lecture, as well as the following ones, will be open to the public.

Charrington Baby To Be Christened Tomorrow Morning

Capt. A. M. Randolph Charrington, jr., United States Army, has arrived from Fort Riley, Kans., where he has been on duty, to join Mrs. Charrington and their young son, Peter Randolph Charrington, at the home of Capt. Charrington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. R. Charrington, in Warrenton. They will spend his leave in Virginia while Capt. Charrington is awaiting further orders. Capt. and Mrs. Charrington's baby, Peter Randolph, will be christened on Sunday morning after services in St. James Episcopal Church, Warrenton, the Rev. Paul Bowden, rector of the church, officiating. Mrs. Harrison Colket of Philadelphia, a cousin of Captain Charrington, will be the godmother for the little boy and godfathers are to be Lieut. Col. Frank McCarthy, United States Army, of Washington, and Lieut. Hamilton Page, United States Army, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. John A. Hinckley will entertain at a luncheon party after the christening at her home near Warrenton, the guests to include the parents, grandparents godparents and near relatives of little Peter Charrington.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farrar of Mill Road Farm, near Leesburg, are being congratulated on the arrival of a daughter on September 22. She has been named Virginia Howard, after her aunt, Miss Virginia Bowman of Warrenton, who is now in Australia with the American Red Cross. Mrs. Farrar was formerly Miss Katherine Bowman of Warrenton.

Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin of Washington, who has been spending the summer and fall months with her sister, Mrs. John Keith, at her home in Warrenton, returned to her home on Connecticut ave. for the winter. Mrs. Keith accompanied Mrs. Hardin to Washington for a visit.

Miss Helen Hazard Powers, whose marriage this evening to Dr. Richard Earle de Butts will be an important social event of the weekend in northern Virginia, has been honored at several delightful parties this week. Mrs. Harry A. de Butts, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, gave a luncheon at the Chevy Chase Club in Washington on Friday in honor of Miss Powers, the bridal party and out-of-town guests. Afterward the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles V. B. Cushman of Windsor Farm, Upperville, entertained at tea in honor of the bride at her winter home in Belle Haven, Alexandria. The guests were asked in to see the many lovely presents that the young couple have received.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Hunter de Butts will entertain Miss Powers, Dr. de Butts and the bridal party at luncheon at her home in Alexandria. Harry A. de Butts of Upperville and Washington gave the bachelors dinner for his brother, Dr. de Butts, at the Metropolitan Club, Washington, on Thursday evening. Dr. de Butts is from Upperville, Va. Miss Powers of Red Bank, N. J., has spent every summer here with her brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. Charles V. B. Cushman. Many of their friends and relatives from the "hunt country" are planning to attend the wedding, which takes place at 9 o'clock Saturday evening in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Alexandria.

Mrs. Frank C. Littleton will return to her home in Middleburg on Saturday from Stratford, the Lee home in Virginia, where she has been a visitor since Monday. She attended the annual meeting there with Mrs. William Simms, Lexington, Ky. and New Orleans. Mrs. Simms will come to Middleburg with Mrs. Littleton for a visit.

Helen Powers Is Much Feted Bride-to-Be

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brune Levering, of Baltimore, now living in Washington, are guests of Mrs. Brune's stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. Harry Pool, at their home near Warrenton. Mr. and Mrs. Pool have recently returned home from a month's visit to Easthampton, L. I., where they visited her sister, Mrs. Alden Kimball.

Jacques de Thier Gets Promotion

The First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Embassy and Mme. Palic will entertain on Monday at an "after 6" party in honor of Jacques de Thier of the Belgian Embassy, who has been promoted from First Secretary to Counselor. Sharing honors will be J. V. Hyka, the new commercial counselor of the Czechoslovakian Embassy.

Mr. Hyka arrived here in the early summer to attend the Food Conference as a delegate. He was active in the establishment of his country in 1916 after the revolution, when he worked with Edouard Benes and Thomas Masaryk. He attended the First World Economic Conference at Geneva in 1922 and was secretary of the League for his government from 1937 to 1939. For eight years he was in London as the head of the Czech information service.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(The Brass Ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, is awarded today to Wendell Willkie.)

Wendell Willkie has just launched what is regarded as his first campaign speech. Between the Willkie who spoke in St. Louis yesterday and the Willkie who battled that hectic 1940 campaign against Roosevelt there has been a tremendous change.

It may not be apparent from a distance, but to those who have seen him close up, it is quite clear that the war, his trip around the world, his conversations with such men as Churchill, Stalin, De Gaulle, Chiang Kai-shek have left a definite imprint on his political soul.

You can see the change between the Willkie of 1940 and the Willkie tof 1943. You can see that he is now voicing a platform of his own, his real convictions, not the platform devised for him by a pussyfooting Republican convention which considered him as a political pig-in-a-poke whom they could discard if he didn't make the grade.

Willkie is now proving himself a tough person to discard. In fact he is a bear-by-the-tail and Republicans can't let go. They found this out during Willkie's recent tour to pep up GOP State committees, which turned out to be one of the most unusual political jaunts in recent political history.

For, instead of wooing Republican votes, he almost rebuffed them. In unvarnished language he told local Republican big-wigs that the party could not come back to power with such time-honored cliches as "free enterprise" or "back to normalcy." He has delivered courageous, critical almost scathing lectures on social progression and what's wrong with the Republican Party. He knocked down some of the most sacred cows in the Grand Old Party, yet with such frank and breath-taking charm that most people, while disagreeing, liked him.

Secret Meeting

Typical of these secret Republican meetings was the Willkie session with the Republican State Central Committee in California. Beside him at lunch sat Lieut. Gov. Frederick F. Houser, Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles, Charles Lyons, GOP speaker of the assembly, and Republican National Committeewoman Edith Van de Water.

Before him sat several hundred Republican committeemen, local office holders, precinct workers and followers of Governor Warren. They had come to look over the man for whom they had beat the drum in 1940 and about whom they had their doubts for 1944.

Willkie, called upon to speak, got up, adjusted his pants, told a funny story and then gave it to them. Actually he was talking to his political enemies. He could have been ambiguous, or attacked Roosevelt, and gained their 100 per cent support. Instead he attacked them and had some praise for Roosevelt.

"You have to give the devil his due," Willkie shot at his startled audience. "The social reforms of the New Deal are here to stay, and if you had been half as smart as President Roosevelt the Republicans would have advocated the legislation that brought the New Deal to power.

"If you continue to campaign on the basis of 'free enterprise' or against bureaucracy, regimentation, price ceilings, Federal centralization of power," Willkie almost snarled, "you won't get anywhere."

Naturally Willkie denounced isolation and gave his already well-known views on world co-operation. But his views on the home front were what really put his audience on their heels.

"You can't win by merely taking polls and saying the people want this and that," Willkie warned. "Why, I have half a mind to take a poll right here. I'll bet that 90 per cent of you men don't go to church once a year. But if I took a poll here today and asked how many of you are churchgoers, everyone of you would raise your hand."

Wealth and Freedom

Then Willkie went back to free enterprise. He told a little of his own life history; how he left Elwood to make $50,000 so he could settle down and be a free man; how making $50,000 was a mere "whipstitch;" and how he immediately wanted more. Finally when he had made half a million he found that wealth did not beget freedom.

Willkie warned that though he still believed in free enterprise, "You must put the responsibility for social freedom upon free enterprise. Your corporations, your big businesses, must pay for the elevation of humanity. And you must admit, by God, that the New Deal, acting as an agent for a tremendous sociological force, has answered the needs of the people.

"I am opposed to the New Deal now," Willkie said, "because it has degenerated into a power without policy—a day-to-day system of balance of power instead of an administration listening to the people and acting accordingly."

Willkie criticized Republicans for their "anti" attitude, like the farmers in Indiana who wanted no ceiling on prices, no control on new equipment, yet advocated a floor below which prices could not go.

"You'd get the damndest bureaucracy by that system you have ever seen," he stormed.

Warns Against Sniping

Willkie even warned his fellow Republicans to quit sniping, to quit talking about personalities, such as the President's family and other New Dealers.

"I don't like Mrs. Roosevelt either," he said and then added humorously that the reason he didn't like her was not because of her teeth or her reforms, but because she had got the trip to Australia which he had asked for.

"However," he added, "Mrs. Roosevelt is one of the most intelligent women in America."

Willkie also spoke of Churchill, paying tribute to his greatness, and his recognition of the fact that America and England must work together.

Then with a twinkle, Willkie added:

"I understand why Mr. Churchill at Harvard said: 'Come join us, let us work together.' It would be like me going to John D. Rockefeller and saying: Come let us pool our resources and work together.' The comparison is about the same."

This was a cross-section of the challenging criticism Willkie hurled at his audience—a cross-section of what he has been giving to similar Republican groups—all off-the-record. More than one Republican big-wig squirmed, flushed. But when Willkie finished, the brains of the Republican Party in California had something to think about.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'My Kingdom for a Cook' Is Now Cooking at Met.

UNDERLYING "MY KINGDOM FOR A COOK," Columbia's new culinary comedy which yesterday was presented for the first time on a local screen as chief feature for the week at the Metropolitan Theater, there is, at least a laudable purpose.

It is dedicated not so much to gastronomy as to the cementing of greater cordiality and better understanding between England and America, and, inferentially, among all the more or less United Nations. The pivot of the unfortunate incidents that disrupt the tranquility of the little city of Concord, Mass., is Rudyard Morley, a celebrated and self-centered English author, who visits this country on a lecture tour and comports himself after the manner of a thoroughgoing cad. Which, incidentally, is giving him the full benefit of gross understatement.

Utterly baffled by our speech and customs, he insults the civic leaders of the town—both genders—cancels speaking engagements right and left, butts in where he has no business and stays out where he has, and caps the climax of his affrontery by "stealing" the best cook in town from the matron who had planned to be his most brilliant hostess. Eventually, for good and sufficient reason, he lands in jail and upon his release largely atones for his past misdemeanors by appearing on a program from which he happily was supposed to be absent and making a plea that his country be not condemned for his own peculiarly personal idiosyncrasies. "Hate me, if you will, but do not hate my people"—or words to that effect.

Lest this sound too much like a poorly camouflaged preachment, it should be made clear that "My Kingdom for a Cook" disguises its major intent under a heavy veneer of comedy, intrusted in almost its entirety to the abundant talents of Charles Coburn, one of the most competent and engaging of the theater's character comedians.

Mr. Coburn has practically all the best lines in the script and imbues them with a subtle humor that is both disarming and delightful.

Through the presence of his daughter, Pamela, opportunity is presented for the introduction of a romantic vein that is none too consistently developed and the matter of the proselyted cook and her gambling husband is the repository of more than a few gentle chuckles. These roles are played by Marguerite Chapman, very good; Bill Carter, not so good, and Washington's Almira Sessions and Edward Gargan, always reliable. Isobel Elsom, Mary Wickes, Ivan Simpson, Melville Cooper, Kathleen Howard and Charles Halton are among those largely swallowed up in the proceedings. One who distinctly is not, is little Betty Brewer, the youngster with the unfailing comedy bent.

The Met's new bill is prolific in short subjects. "In the Drink" reveals safety devices for the protection of bomber crews brought down on the water; "Speaking of Animals" varies the usual Western travelogue with amusing comments by the pictured beasts, and "Dude Ranch Buckaroos," depicts the streamlining of the New West, in Technicolor. The newsreel completes the program.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway's Pulse Beat

New York, Oct. 15.

From Margaret Bourke-White the camerawoman, now in Africa: "On January 22 General Doolittle permitted me to fly in the leadship to photograph the bombing of Tunis. You can imagine what a moving experience it was for me now to land at the airport I helped bomb. I could hardly believe they wouldn't shoot up a lot of flak at us when we circled in. I visited the Nazi graveyard, with rows and rows of black and white painted swastikas instead of crosses, each one with a good Hun name on it, and MY date—January 22. It made me feel strange . . . The WACS have the reputation of being deeply reliable about military secrets. I photographed the girls who had worked on the whole Sicilian campaign—had taken dictation on it right from the start. They had to burn each page of shorthand notes in a little bowl as soon as transcribed . . . Regards."

MARY MARTIN

CBS has acquired the first broadcast rights to Shostakhovitch's Eighth Symphony, and it will be played by Artur Rodzinski and the N. Y. Philharmonic. A record price was paid for these rights . . . Mrs. Paul Robeson will be awarded a Ph.D. degree by the theological seminary in Hartford. Her husband has had a Ph.D. for many years . . . The N. Y. Times refused The Protestant's full-page ad giving a partial list of the 1881 Protestant ministers who urge: "Smash Anti-Semitism." The Times' explanation was that the ad is not in the public interest.

When Al Jolson signed the contract for his current radio series with American Tobacco, he discovered that it contained the usual option-clauses. "I don't want these clauses," he told George Washington Hill, "so take 'em out" . . . "No option-clauses?" Hill gasped. "Can you give me one good reason why you don't want option-clauses? Every other radio contract has them—so why don't you? . . . I don't need 'em," explained Jolson, "because I'm a wealthy man" . . . Hill opened his office door and told his secretary: "Send for a psychiatrist" . . . . "No," Jolson added, "Send to my hotel room for the keys to my vaults."

The producers of "One Touch of Venus" have engaged no understudy for Mary Martin, the star. The only other show, in recent years, in which the star was irreplaceable even for one night was Moss Hart's "Lady in the Dark," in which Gertrude Lawrence played the leading role. A young lady applied for a minor role, and when she was asked to state her experience, she boldly asserted: "I was the understudy in 'Susan and God,' which starred Gertrude Lawrence." . . . "If you were the understudy in 'Susan and God,'" replied Hart, "then you must've been understudying God."

Jimmy Savo's valet works for him only when Savo gets a theatrical booking. Except for the brief interval when Savo worked in the raided musical, "Wine, Women and Song," the valet has been practically jobless. And during those lulls, he returns to his place in the Bowery . . . Savo now is rehearsing, at last, in a new musical, "What's Up." Before he signed the contract, he received a phone call from his valet, who asked: "Got any bookings?" . . . "Not yet," said Savo . . . "Well, g'bye," said the valet, returning to the Bowery. "Keep your chin up, boss."

Chnages Pictures

Donald Meek completed the role of a furtive hoarder of groceries in M-G-M-'s comedy, "Rationing," which stars Wallace Berry. The veteran character actor starts immediately on his next featured assignment in the musical, "Two Sisters and a Sailor," where he joins a cast headed by Jimmy Durante. Gloria De Haven, June Allyson and Van Johnson.

Wheats on One, Flapjack Coming Over!

MARGUERITE CHAPMAN AND CHARLES COBURN principal feminine interest and star, respectively, of Columbia's production of "My Kingdom for a Cook," the culinary comedy which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater. Isobel Elsom and Edward Gargan are among others of prominence in the cast.

HEDDA HOPPER

Sure Sounds Romantic!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 15.—Charles Boyer and Barbara Stanwyck will costar in Boyer's next picture, "One Night With You." Title must mean one night of love. Story's being written to order by Bruce Manning, after Bruce settles down to "As Before, Better Than Before" . . . Whatever happened to the Clare Luce story about Mme. Chiang which she wrote for Twentieth Century months ago? . . . Director John Cromwell has done so well with "Since You Went Away" that David Selznick has already assigned him to "So Little Time" which will star Joe Cotten . . . Bearded Monty Woolley would have you know that Shirley Temple is like an electric clock that never runs down. "She's tireless," says Monty, who likes sitting better than standing, and lying better than either . . . Bob Riskin of OWI is leaving for Italy to discuss with bigwigs over there which of our pictures shall be shown occupied countries—when they're taken . . . Well, what do you know! Bob Benchley has a new wife—Helen Broderick—for "Her Primitive Man." But that ain't what I'd call him.

BARBARA STANWYCK

Spring in Fall

When W. R. Frank finishes "Dr. Goebbels—Life and Loves," he'll begin "Springtime in Vienna," a musical with Claudia Drake, Sigrid Gurie and Beryl Wallace. Quite a switch in pace . . . When "At Night We Dream" hits the sound stage with Paul Muni, I hope they'll add Marlene Dietrich as George Sand. If you're going to wear pants on the screen, why not get the girl who wears them best? . . . The Ezra Stones are expecting . . . Ann Harding's the only actress tested so far for the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Norma Shearer is being considered for the second . . . Frances Langford is our next player to launch a Liberty ship.

East More Important

Wonder why Antoinette Perry, Rachel Crothers, Mrs. Brock Pemberton and Helen Menken, who originated the theater wing, would make a trek to Hollywood to receive a check from Sol Lesser for proceeds from the picture "Stage Door Canteen." That ceremony should be held in New York where they've got two canteens—the Stage Door and Merchant Marine.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Capital Store Sales Up 15% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended October 9 were 15 per cent larger than in the corresponding period last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

For the four weeks ended October 9, the seven reporting stores here showed a gain of 9 per cent over the same 1942 period.

A factor in the increased volume, store officials here point out, was the buying of Christmas presents to send overseas. Many also are buying Yule gifts early this year because they fear that there will not be much choice by the time the regular Christmas shopping season starts.

Many stores are urging customers to shop early to ease both the serious shortage of sales persons and the greatly curtailed delivery services.

The entire Fifth Reserve District exhibited a sales increase of 8 per cent for the week and the same percentage upturn for the four-week period.

AT&T Net Rises To $2.38 a Share

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and subsidiaries reported today net income of $46,216,621 for the quarter ended August 31, or $2.38 a common share, compared with $41,019,026, or $2.11 a common share, for the like period of 1942.

Net for the 12 months ended August 31 amounted to $182,878,362, or $9.42 a common share, compared with $177,541,781, or $9.14 a common share, for the preceding year.

For the parent company alone, net income for the quarter ended September 30 was $42,639,000 or $2.28 a share against $40,208,112 or $2.15 a share in the comparable 1942 period. For 12 months ended September 30 the parent concern netted $164,624,000 or $8.80 a share compared with $168,439,730 or $9.01 a share in the preceding fiscal year.

3.2 Billion in Bonds Allotted to Banks

The Treasury announced yesterday it had allotted $3,204,544,000 worth of securities on the basis of last week's bank financing operation designed to supplement the recent 15 billion dollar third war loan.

Final figures on the war loan, already oversubscribed more than three billion dollars are expected next week.

D. C. Draft Delinquents Total Less Than 1% of Registration

There are approximately 2000 so-called draft delinquents in the District, less than one per cent of the total registrants, Selective Service Headquarters announced yesterday.

The national drive to make draft delinquents straighten out their affairs with local boards, or face immediate induction on November 1, is not expected to result in wholesale inductions here or a mass rush to boards by men who have neglected to notify local boards of their change of address, the District headquarters said. It was estimated there are 95,000 delinquents in the nation.

The campaign is directed primarily against "men whose carelessness has caused the keeping of incomplete and up-to-date records," Selective Service said.

Meanwhile, seventy-two Washingtonians, inducted into the armed services during the past three weeks, were called to report for active duty Monday, District Selective Service Headquarters announced.

Inducted September 27, the following will report to the Army:

The following men inducted October 11, will report to the Navy:

The following Negroes, inducted October 4, will report to the Marine Corps:

Joseph G. Young, George W. Proctor, Jesse S. Brown, jr., Jubal W. Patterson.

Jap Move to Drive Chinese Across Salween Indicated

Chungking, Oct. 15 (AP).—Japanese land operations in western Yunnan Province are aimed at driving Chinese forces across the Salween River as a precaution against a possible Allied counter-attack to regain the important north Burma stronghold of Myitkyina, a Chinese army spokesman said today.

Allied repossession of Myitkyian generally is regarded essential for the reopening of a land supply route to China.

(A British communique reported today that British and Japanese patrols have clashed for the second time in recent days near Maungdaw, about 100 miles northeast of Akyab, Burma. RAF bombers continued attacks on Japanese positions in the Chin Hills, the Okyab Island and Irawaddy River areas.)

(Medium and heavy United States bombers blasted rail targets and ferry crossings in Burma October 13, a communique announced at New Delhi.)

Daughter Is Born To Gene Tierney

Gene Tierney, screen actress, became a mother at Columbia Hospital here yesterday morning. The child, a girl, weighed 3 pounds and 2 ounces.

The baby arrived prematurely and will be in an incubator for several days, it was said at the hospital. Both mother and the baby were doing well.

Man Under $1000 Bond on Charge Of Impersonation

Albert Armstrong, 36, formerly employed as a machinist in the navy yard here, was arraigned in Commissioner Turnage's office yesterday, charged with identifying himself as a special agent of the FBI to the driver of a truck with which he collided August 3 in New Haven, Conn. Armstrong waived preliminary examination before the commissioner and was held under $1000 bond for removal to New Haven.

FBI agents reported yesterday that Armstrong was picked up at 619 Jefferson st. nw., late Thursday afternoon by special agents about an hour after he arrived in town. The FBI said he admitted the charge and that he also said that he had received $15 from the truck driver to settle the case. Armstrong also admitted that he had identified himself as a special agent when he registered later in a New York City hotel, they said.

Malcolm Ross Is Named New FEPC Chairman

The resignation of Msgr. Francis J. Haas as chairman of the Fair Employment Practice Committee was accepted yesterday by President Roosevelt and Deputy Chairman Malcolm Ross was named to succeed him.

The committee was set up to insure fair opportunities for employment during the war to persons of all races and colors.

Monsignor Haas resigned upon his designation by Pope Pius to be Bishop of the Diocese of Grand Rapids, Mich. In a letter to the FEPC, Mr. Roosevelt said Monsignor Haas "has offered to continue to give us his counsel." He added:

"There are many difficulties before us. I feel satisfied, however, that in you the country has a committee upon which it can depend for wise and determined dealing with this problem which is essential to the fulfillment of the promises of our democracy."

Let It Rain!
Let It Shine!

HERE ARE YOUR Reversibles FOR ANY TIME!

Why is the reversible coat the favorite with the school crowd? Because it's fashioned on classic lines that are equally good over bulky tweeds or more slimmed down date clothing . . . Because it has two faces, one that turns to the sun and one that's proof against rain . . . Because it's like two coats in one, with extra warmth, extra attractiveness. That's why The Hecht Company, believing that youth must be served, brings you youth's favorite . . . the reversible, in plaid, in corduroy, in covert and in cavalry twill.
